Good From Evil.
Regulated Cannibals.
Politics, Very Little.
Realist—Optimist.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1928.)

JOHN J. RASKOB, chairman of the Democratic committee, establishes, with $1,000,000, a foundation to help poor children start in life. The money is given in memory of his son, William Raskob, whose life was cut short at 20 in an automobile accident.

Wise Providence, extracting good from evil, makes the sorrow of affectionate parents a blessing to the poor.

SIR HUBERT WILKINS' book, "Undiscovered Australia," takes you back to Marco Polo's travels in the East.

Sir Hubert saw many savages with long tails, long enough to show in photographs.

These savages are cannibals and admit it, but they regulate cannibalism. "Only young men may eat young babies." The flesh of young girls is reserved for old men of the tribe. Women may not eat young boys, but anybody may eat grown up men and women.

Even aborigines converted to Christianity cling to cannibalism. A man killed for wife stealing was eaten. The savages said: "His spirit has gone to Jesus; it will not return to harm us. Why should we waste fine fat meat?"

Marco Polo described men even lower in the scale and with longer tails. Most annoying to anti-evolutionists. But probably Satan planned the thing to worry us.

GOV. SMITH will talk to the farmers again. Herbert Hoover is going South to try to break that solid Democratic region, first Republican candidate to undertake the task in many years.

MR. HOOVER is said to be undecided about topics for certain speeches.

Indecision, usually foreign to him, should be completely lacking in this campaign. The people want answers to THESE questions:

Are you going to continue prosperity and increase it?

Have you planned for improving this country for great national undertakings, roads, canals, drainage, irrigation, power?

Is it your intention, in time of need, to use unemployed manpower in public works, at fair pay, instead of allowing it to go to waste?

GOV. SMITH also will visit the South and undertake to keep it solid.

He will tell the Southerners that his plans would not force them to turn wet. States that want to be dry would be dry. Those that want to be wet would be wet.

THE King sent congratulations yesterday to T. P. O'Connor, oldest member of the House of Commons, on his eightieth birthday.

O'Connor says he is a realist-optimist. As a realist, he knows that life is sad. As an optimist, he refuses to be discouraged.

O'Connor took his first newspaper job 61 years ago.

To be an optimist after 61 years of newspaper work is unusual.

THE Count Zeppelin will start from Berlin on October 9 and make the flight to New York "in from 50 to 80 hours." Four American passengers are paying $12,000 for the one-way trip.

Let us welcome this proof of German enterprise, but not forget that "in from 50 to 80 hours" enough explosives and poison gas could be sent across the Atlantic to destroy billions in property and kill millions of human beings in cities along the coast.

JOHN M. PHILLIPS, accused of getting millions by bribery and corrupt contracts in Queens, New York City, lost his millions gambling at race tracks and finally drank himself to death with bootleg liquor.

There is a text in his life that might help to fill churches.

CONGRESSMAN SABATH, of Illinois, says the Coolidge administration is responsible for Mrs. Mabel Willebrandt's political speeches before Methodist Church gatherings. Mrs. Willebrandt talked to Methodists about prohibition. Congressman Sabath says: "That is part of a whispering campaign."

Congressman Sabath is excited because Mrs. Willebrandt draws her salary from the government as she does her talking.

Does Congressman Sabath cease to draw his salary while he talks? If not, why?

Why not revive an ancient custom and censor all speeches in advance?

ADMIRAL FISKE, inventor of the valuable "range finder," will at the age of 74, cast his first vote for Hoover, because he thinks Democratic pacifism would endanger the country.

Democracy is whatever the leaders in charge choose to make it. Grover Cleveland, a Democrat, wasn't a pacifist. Woodrow Wilson was a Democrat, and but for him this country wouldn't have entered the war.

THE SERIES GOES ON

Today Mrs. Albert P. Snyder and her son, Albert, Jr., and Mrs. L. McVail, all of 1428 Columbus avenue, aren't a bit sorry they sat thusly in the rain before the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Building all during the progress of the second game of the world series. There were no ill effects and they had every play in the game from the Sun-Telegraph's magnetic scoreboard. There are seats for thousands at the Sun-Telegraph for Sunday's game, starting at 2:30 o'clock Eastern time.

Girl Thief For Love

HARRISBURG, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Details of how a $1,380-a-year girl clerk was able to buy an automobile and send money and other gifts to the man she loved were revealed by Dr. John A. H. Keith, superintendent of public instruction, in making public today the report of auditors, which resulted in the arrest of Miss Dorothy Currey at West Chester.

Miss Currey, a stenographer-clerk at the West Chester state teachers' college, was charged with defalcations totaling $15,252 from the school and held in $1,000 bail for court.

MAKES CONFESSION

According to the auditors' report she has confessed to taking $11,869 of the amount reported missing from the college funds.

Ninety per cent of that amount, the report quoted her as saying, was turned over to J. P. Treacy, a married man of Pittsburgh, an agent for the Teachers' Protective Union of Lancaster, with whom she said she was affianced. Treacy has denied that he was engaged to the girl and that he received that much money from her. Records of a telegraph company at West Chester reveal that she sent $2,010 to him by wire.

The girl denied that Treacy had ever encouraged her to take the money, although she said he has never returned a cent. She met Treacy at Atlantic City in May, 1926, and became infatuated with him. Her peculations at the school began the following January and continued until the audit revealed the disappearance of the money.

HANDLED CASH

According to the auditors' report, Miss Currey, though only a clerk, received most of the cash deposits from students and was given authority to receipt the money. There were two sets of books and most of the money was obtained by crediting the amounts received in one book as well as giving a receipt to the student but making a smaller entry in the cash book, which showed the cash income. She also

JAWORSKI HELD SANE

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Paul Jaworski, alleged slayer of Patrolman Anthony Wieczorek, was pronounced sane today by Doctors H. H. Drysdale and John S. Tierney, Cleveland alienists, in a report to County Prosecutor Edward C. Stanton, who had delegated them to examine him.

Not content with the finding, Jaworski's defense attorneys, headed by H. H. Felsman, plan to petition the court for appointment of a lunacy commission to examine Jaworski. Should he be found insane, he would automatically be sent to a state institution and escape trial for the killing.

REPORTS HOLDUP BY EPIPHANY ST. BANDITS

James Smith, 4220 Renova street, reported to police that he was held up by two Negroes and robbed of $3 while walking on Epiphany street, near Townsend street, early today.

PA. STRAW POLL POINTS TO LARGE REGISTRATION

A heavy increase in registration in the cities of Pennsylvania, particularly by the women of the state, is indicated by the returns to date in the straw vote canvass of Pennsylvania conducted by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

A compilation of the ballots received in the poll to the present forecasts an increase of almost 25 per cent in the registration in the cities this year, compared to the registration in the presidential election of 1924.

The registration of women should show an increase of about 33 per cent and that of men more than 20 per cent, according to present indications of the poll, which are subject to change as the daily volume of votes increase the totals.

On the present standing, the total vote throughout the state this year should be about 17 per cent greater than the total vote of 1924, the equivalent of about 350,000 additional votes.

The present totals in the Pennsylvania poll, conducted in connection with the nation-wide canvass by the Hearst papers, are: Hoover 39,832, including 31,967 men and 7,865 women; Smith 26,706, including 20,728 men and 5,978 women.

This vote in 1924 was divided as follows: Coolidge 45,646, including 36,551 men and 9,095 women; Davis 7,287, including 6,139 men and 1,148 women; LaFollette 4,222; not voting 9,383.

Garland's 'Trivial' On Floods Rapped

Pittsburgh suffers every year flood losses that are far from trivial, questioning of merchants along the river front in the Golden Triangle disclosed today. In the debate between Councilman Robert Garland and A. H. Burchfield, a director of the Flood Commission of Pittsburgh, as to whether the inundations that have occurred since the great flood of 1907 can be regarded as serious, the concensus of opinion was that the Councilman was ill-advised in belittling the damage.

WHAT THEY SAY!

J. B. SHEA, president, Joseph Horne Co., says:

"I should say it is not 'trivial.' The man who says floods are trivial doesn't know what he is talking about. During the past seven years, protective measures against the floods have cost us in investment only $150,000 and each flood costs us about $5,000."

Mrs. CLARA CLINTON, owner, Chatham Hotel, says:

"Floods look less important to Councilman Garland because he doesn't see them. Every time the water rises it puts us out of commission by flooding the cellars, and he cannot see in the cellars. Water doesn't often appear on Penn avenue since the street was raised four feet. They cost us considerable every year."

ANDREW CONNOLLY, former executive of Joyce's department store, 305-9 Penn avenue, says:

"This department store was largely put out of business as the direct results of the floods of the Allegheny River."

L. FRED KLOOZ, manager Roosevelt Hotel, says:

"Live down here 23 years and you'll learn that floods are not trivial. Last spring the water was bad. Each flood costs over $5,000, besides driving business away. While our new hotel was built especially with flood protection in mind, the floods cause an unsanitary condition that is sometimes terrible. They halt elevator service and flood the engine room and clog the sewerage."

JOHN B. REYNOLDS, manager, Alvin and Pitt theaters, says:

"Both the Alvin and the Pitt theaters are harmed considerably by the floods, and two or three times a year we use a day and night crew on the pumps to keep the water out. While the water has never shut us down, it costs us considerable for flood gates, stop valves and other equipment, and that applies to both buildings."

H. M. HOLBERG, general manager, Oppenheim-Collins Co., says:

"Floods here are certainly not trivial. The danger and irritation from them are increasing instead of diminishing. We just bought a new pump a few months ago, and keep crews working 24 hours when the water in the river is rising. The worry of a flood is annoying. One never knows when they will come. Another source of irritation, brought out last spring during the flood, was the Floods or No Floods?

"There has been no particular flood since 1907—21 years ago."—Councilman Robert Garland.

Here is the record since March 15, 1907, when the disastrous flood stage of 35.5 feet was reached, as shown at the United States Weather Bureau:

(Flood stage prior to March, 1926, was 22 feet; since then it has been 25 feet).

The stages given prior to January, 1927, are based on the old river gauge then in effect, which set the flood stage at 22 feet. In March, 1926, the government lowered the zero of the river gauge 3.2 feet, thus putting the flood stage at 25 feet.

When the flood waters reach two or more feet over the flood stage considerable damage results, it was stated at the Weather Bureau. A perusal of the above tabulation shows that nine times since the 1907 flood high waters here reached five or more feet above the flood stage.

TWO HERE TO GET SLOT MACHINES NABBED

Two wise young men from Gotham came to Pittsburgh yesterday to take advantage of the slump in the slot machine market here and today they had walked—via Morals Court—right into subpenas for their appearance before the graft-probing grand jury.

"This is a break," said Assistant District Attorney Andrew T. Park as he prepared to issue subpenas for the men—Edward Wright, of 229 Forty-ninth street, New York, and Thomas Franklin, of 1507 Sothern boulevard, New York.

Before they attracted Park's attention the New Yorkers told Magistrate A. D. Brandon they had arranged to buy their machines at greatly reduced prices from a man they said was Isadore Rosenberg. Park also is interested in finding Rosenberg.

ARRESTED ON TIP

Wright and Franklin were arrested in a downtown hotel by city detectives acting on a tip. They were booked as suspicious persons and were held by Magistrate Brandon for further investigation.

At the hearing they said their visit here had been impelled by the wide publicity given the drive on slot machine owners and other racketeers in Pittsburgh. The word has been spread, they said, that $80 slot machines could be had for as low as $50 by go-getters who got in on the ground floor while Pittsburgh's racketeers were in a highly nervous state.

Brandon was told by the men that they were acting as agents for William Kenney, of Center street, New York, and Al Friedman, of East Eleventh street, New York. City detectives said they had evidence of telegraphic communication among the four men.

Park said he would call the men before the grand jury Monday, when he also expects to summon "some of the big racketeers." Since sub-

Grid Team Rooters In Riot

GREENSBURG, Oct. 6.—Thirty persons were detained by State Police late last night following a street battle in Youngwood, four miles south of here, between rooters for the Greensburg High School and the Youngwood High School.

The battle, which took place on the main street in Youngwood, began when Greensburg students arrived with a truckload of tomatoes, cabbage and other vegetables with which to pelt the Youngwood football team. The teams of the two schools will meet on the gridiron at Greensburg today.

One man was injured in last night's battle. He is Homer Glass, of Greensburg, who was cut by broken glass when the windshield of his automobile was shattered.

The detained persons, students of the two schools, later were released by state police with a warning against further disorders today.

LAST DAY TO REGISTER RUSH ON

If the expected rush to the polls today materializes, more than 200,000 Pittsburgh men and women will be qualified to vote for Herbert Hoover or Alfred E. Smith on November 6.

Today is the final registration day in Pittsburgh and all other Pennsylvania cities. In Pittsburgh the registrars were at the polling places from 7 until 10 o'clock this morning. The polls will reopen at 4 o'clock this afternoon, the closing hour being 10 o'clock, although the boards have been instructed to remain on the job until all those desiring are registered.

The hours in McKeesport, Duquesne and Clairton are from 7 to 9 a. m., 11 a. m. to 2 p. m. and 4 p. m. to 10 p. m.

The office of Delinquent Tax Collector Walter J. Christy will be open until 10 o'clock tonight to accommodate those who have waited until the eleventh hour to secure the necessary tax receipts. The crowd there yesterday was the largest of the week, but, according to attaches of the office, was not unusual.

'Held Up' on Road, Weds Couple At Midnight

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—The Rev. R. M. Dodrill, West Union, was motoring home from Clarksburg at midnight with a friend when another car roared up in the rear, the occupants calling for the pastor to halt.

Fearing a holdup, Mr. Dodrill hurried on, but the other machine rushed ahead and blocked the road.

As the minister's car drew up, a voice asked, "Have you got your book; we want to get married.

And at midnight, on a country highway, the preacher united in marriage Lillie Isabel Thompson and John Ellis Vincent.

ESCAPE CRASH, ROUND HOME

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Oct. 6.—Although 25 broken freight cars and their contents strew the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Conemaugh, near here, early today, the Cardinal special, carrying the St. Louis baseball club was rushed through on the only open line while other specials and extra-fare trains were delayed.

The baseball writers' special, carrying several hundred newspaper correspondents, also was rushed through on the one open line. Scores of extra-fare trains, many of them carrying fans to St. Louis for Sunday's game, were held up for more than an hour. The Yankee ball club is traveling over the New York Central route.

TRAFFIC "DOUBLED UP"

West-bound trains that usually consist of two sections last night were made up of as high as 16 sections. The heavy traffic and the importance of having the specials arrive on time presented a difficult problem for railroad officials who, considering the barriers, did good work in keeping the most important trains moving.

As far as could be learned no one was injured in the smashup. Neither could the cause of the accident be ascertained this morning. The heavy freight train seemed to have buckled, shoving the cars out over the main passenger tracks, tearing up ties and bending the rails. One east bound track was kept open, however, and the west bound trains were shunted over this section of track around the wreck.

Railroad officials expected to have the main line tracks cleared before noon and to have traffic moving almost normally. Wreck trains and workmen labored through the early hours and as they made progress the trains were sent ahead.

EN ROUTE WITH WORLD SERIES SPECIAL FROM NEW YORK TO ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—The merry Yankees and forlorn Cardinals are hurrying today toward St. Louis, where tomorrow there will be an exciting resumption of the titular fights, which so far have made the National League resemble a circuit several degrees removed from the upstart organization known as the American League. And the difference is not in favor of the National.

Perhaps one of those demon statisticians will dig up some facts with which to revile me, but even at this risk, it is stated that the Yanks appear to have come close to a record in winning six world series games in a row. For information on the other four send a self-addressed envelope to Dunlee Bush or any other member of the Pirates of 1927 and they will let you in on the "know" without writing on both sides of the paper.

LAWYERS GET DISCIPLINE BOARD

The Board of Governace for the Pennsylvania Bar, constituting a single court to discipline lawyers who transgress the law or offend against the ethics of the profession, has been created by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court.

This extraordinary step, designed to advance the standing of the Pennsylvania bench and bar, was announced last night by Chief Justice Robert von Moschzisker, of the Supreme Court. The announcement was made at a testimonial dinner held at the University Club by the Allegheny County Bar Association to honor Justice von Moschzisker, who completed 25 years as a jurist, and the associate justices of the Supreme Court.

MARKS EPOCH

It was termed a radical departure, marking an epoch in the annals of the Pennsylvania bar, in an address of appreciation by Joseph Stadtfeld, president of the Allegheny Bar Association.

Eleven special standing masters were named to the board, each to serve five years, with one exception, and to be eligible for only one reappointment. They are John Hampton Barnes, Philadelphia, chief master; J. Roy Dickie, Pittsburgh; Francis B. Bracken, Philadelphia; William S. Rial, Greensburg; Charles F. C. Arensberg, Pittsburgh; Bernard J. Myers, Lancaster; W. A. Valentine, Wilkes-Barre; Archibald M. Hoagland, Williamsport; Thomas C. Hare, Altoona; Aaron S. Swartz, Jr., Norristown, and Arthur W. Mitchell, Erie. The last-named was appointed for three years.

REED CRYPTIC

United States Senator David A. Reed, in an address of greeting, paid high tribute to the Chief Justice and Associate Justices.

Senator Reed said: "This state of ours, I am afraid, ranks low among our sister states. To some extent it is deserved, to some extent it is not. But the judiciary of Pennsylvania is without blemish. Its standing is high in the nation."

Senator Reed made extended reference to the future of Justice von Moschzisker, with opportunity to excel his splendid record of the past. The Chief Justice, under the constitution, retires next year on com-

LADY HAY

Lady Drummond Hay, shown here with Carl Von Wiegand, Hearst papers' correspondent, will be the only woman passenger on the ocean hop.

W. R. HEARST FAVORS HOOVER—PROSPERITY

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Following is an interview given the New York City News Association by Mr. William Randolph Hearst upon his return from Europe:

William Randolph Hearst who, while in Europe, issued a statement through the Brooklyn Eagle in which he committed himself to the support of Hoover, yesterday restated his attitude, but added that his chain of newspapers "will not go deeply into politics at all, but print the news as impartially as we can."

He said:

"I am inclined to favor Mr. Hoover simply on the basis of the continuation of the administrative system, which seems to have been very successful, and of benefit to the country. I am really not opposed to Gov. Smith, but I am inclined to continue the present adlive system."

BOAT-ROCKING

f he believed any of the Democratic issues were of such outstanding importance that they would throw the election to the Democrats, Mr. Hearst said:

"As I said in my statement (the one appearing in the Brooklyn Eagle), there is no great dissatisfaction that would justify trying a new policy, which would mean trying a new party. I am rather disposed to believe that the general public will be inclined to preserve the present conditions.

"If we do not think we are prosperous in America, they certainly believe abroad that we are very prosperous. In fact, they think it so deeply, they think they ought not to pay their debts."

Mr. Hearst then pointed to the New York American, which was given to him as he stood on the deck, and said:

"I notice a story from Washington today that Mr. Mellon will continue as Secretary of the Treasury under Mr. Hoover, if the Republican candidate is elected. If this is so, it is of enormous importance and to Mr. Hoover's advantage, because the American people are just as pleased over the manner in which Mr. Mellon has handled his portfolio as they are over Mr. Coolidge's program."

ROOSEVELT ADDS STRENGTH

Told that the New York Sun and the New York Telegram had both elected to support the candidacy of Franklin D. Roosevelt for the governorship, Mr. Hearst looked surprised.

Then he said:

"Roosevelt is a very strong candidate. I think it is a very wise nomination. Gov. Smith has shown his usual political sagacity in persuading Mr. Roosevelt to run."

Asked if his newspapers would take any active part in either the campaigns of presidency or governorship, Mr. Hearst intimated that he would advocate a neutral position, and print the political news as impartially as possible. He added:

"The fact is, there are a lot of good men running for office. The only thing I care to emphasize is that we choose between preserving the present system, which works out well, or we want a change; and I do not think a change is wise."

LIQUOR FALSE ISSUE

As to the prohibition issue, Mr. Hearst discounted it as not logically fitting into a presidential campaign. He said:

"I think the prohibition issue is a false one, an issue that has no place in a presidential campaign. Neither candidate has any influence in altering the Eighteenth amendment and the belief that either has such influence illustrates how little many people know of the Constitution of the country."

It was suggested that a presidential candidate might influence the general attitude toward prohibition by making appointments as to its enforcement, and this the publisher met with a laugh, saying:

"That would not be consistent with the oath of the President, would it? It would be to subvert the Constitution. It is unreasonable even to admit such a possibility, nor would either candidate, if elected, lend himself to such a scheme.

"I do believe that prohibition is a great and vital question, and as an advocate of temperance I am opposed to prohibition. I believe that it has been proved to the satisfaction of intelligent and impartial people that it has been a failure, and I am certain that in a few years, say 10 at the most, it will have demonstrated itself to be such a failure that there will be a modification of the amendment.

LOOKS TO TEMPERATE

"It will not be done by the wets, but by the temperance-minded people themselves, who will see its ineffectuality.

"Advocates of temperance will work for modification, for instead of creating a condition of temperance the prohibition movement has turned men to hard liquors. Prohibition as a temperance measure is a failure."

Mr. Hearst then said that prohibition is, under the Constitution, a matter for the states to settle and not a Federal question at all; and pointed out that when a revision of the present law is brought about it would be through the action of the people voting through the unit of the state.

Asked if he did not think the issue of prohibition in the presidential campaign might be regarded as a referendum on the attitude of the American people on prohibition, he replied:

"I do not think it can be regarded as a poll at all. There are too many other issues both parties are presenting for the vote to be an exclusive one on prohibition. Furthermore, we cannot make prohibition an issue with thinking people who know that the question can only be settled by the states, and can in no way be determined by the Federal government."

POWER 'GREAT ISSUE'

Told that Gov. Smith had ridiculed the Hoover program for meeting the water power issue in his Denver speech, Mr. Hearst said:

"Water power is undoubtly one of the big issues. In fact, I would describe it as 'a great issue.' And here is an issue which can be and should be dealt with by the Federal government.

"The states, of course, have their local needs and policies, but when the people consider this great question from a national viewpoint they will realize that a finer engineering idea has never been involved than Hoover's great plan for combining the water problems of all sections of the United States in one great national programme.

"This plan alone would recommend the selection of Mr. Hoover as president."

It was suggested that Hoover's plan was regarded by many as inadequate.

Mr. Hearst added:

"It is time that we had a great constructive plan, instead of disjointed and disconnected local plans.

"As Mr. Hoover has said, it is only a large plan of this kind that is apt to get through Congress. A local bill covering local undertakings has only the support of local citizens and local politicians.

"A national plan which will benefit all sections will secure the support of the citizens of all sections and the representatives of all sections.

"Whether you like Mr. Hoover or not as a politician, you have to recognize him as one of the greatest engineers of the world. This country at this time needs constructive policies."

When asked if he thought Tammany would affect Gov. Smith's chances, Mr. Hearst said:

"I think Tammany may benefit his campaign in New York, but will affect his campaign adversely in the rest of the country, where Tammany Hall is not liked and not trusted."

RELIGION NO ISSUE

Of the religious issues which have been injected into the presidential campaign, Mr. Hearst declared:

"Religion has so little place in politics that I refuse to discuss it. The way to keep religion out of politics is to keep religion out of politics.

"There should be no political discussion of religious questions, and there should be no voting against a man because of his religion, and on the other hand, no voting for a man because of his religion. Either action tends to drag religion into politics, where it distinctly does not belong."

"We, as patriotic citizens, should sympathize with the desire of the framers of the Constitution of the United States to guarantee absolute freedom of thought."

Mr. Hearst has been abroad for two months, in which time he traveled through France, Northern Italy, Austria, Germany, Holland and England.

He was accompanied by his two sons, Elbert and Randolph.

The publisher said that with the exception of some business with his magazine editors in London, the whole trip was for pleasure, and that he enjoyed traveling with two lads in their early teens.

He will remain in New York until after election.

M. E. LAYMEN WANT VOTE

Full franchise on all questions not solely and wholly dealing with their clergymen is asked by the Methodist Episcopal laymen who are seeking official recognition at the general assembly. This desire was voiced yesterday by laymen attending the annual meeting of the Pittsburgh conference being held in McKeesport. Clergymen of the denomination as a whole are not in favor of laymen in the conference as voting members.

The Rev. Ralph B. Urmy, editor of the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate, is backing the laymen in their fight. Mr. Urmy, who is pastor of the Bellevue church, declared that to give laymen a vote would be a great advantage to the church work and the only fair thing to do. He spoke at the afternoon session of the laymen's meeting being held in the Central Presbyterian Church, McKeesport.

A probable shortage of $750,000 in the requirements of the world work department of the church will be met by 7,500 $100 subscriptions, according to a plan presented by Ralph Ward. Yesterday's session of the clergymen saw five preachers graduated and admitted to the conference, two others admitted as deacons and two others admitted by transfer from other coferences.

CARDS ESCAPE CRASH

to terrible injuries of one sort or another. The advance information has held good so far as Earl Combs and Herb Pennock are concerned, but Huggins seems to have as much reserve material as Knute Rockne, with the result that the sick Yanks are two-up on the Cards after two days' play on the home course. The switch of the battle picture to the banks of the Mississippi may have the effect of a good restorative on the Redbirds, who will have to kick in with a victory soon, else there will be no resumption of play in New York during the latter part of next week.

RESUME PLAY TOMORROW

The adversaries are due to open the St. Louis engagements tomorrow afternoon. Three games are scheduled for Sportsmen's Park. The Yanks can close the books on another wonderful season by the simple expedient of winning two of the three games. There is no way in which the Redbirds can end it up while at home.

The home cheering section, it is believed, may have a fine effect on the morale of the slumping Cardinals. St. Louis fans, by the way, are just about as partisan as any to be found the length and breadth of the land; they may need all of their influencing qualities to get the Redbirds out in front of the Yankees in the three fights that impend.

The same club that pounded a furious gait down the highways and byways of the National League has made a total of seven hits in two games, which is just two more than Babe Ruth has unloaded all by himself. It is not hard to place your finger on the trouble when one looks at the baseball column of the Cards, but their ailments do not end there.

THROW "HOME-RUN" BALL

The Redbird pitchers have made a specialty of throwing the "home-run" ball in clinches.

Bill Sherdel did this little thing in the opener and Grover Alexander matched the stunt yesterday when the Yanks rode to a 9-to-3 victory.

Aleck, sad to state, was far from his wonderful form, especially after Lou Gehrig had lambasted a homer into the rightfield seats in the first with Ruth and Durst on the bases. The great pitcher was relieved in the third while the Yankees were shelling him. Clarence Mitchell carried his southpaw spitball to the hill and after a bad start made a fine finish. The harm, however, had been done before Mitch reached the scene.

George Pipgras, slab hero of the day, opened the game much after the fashion of a drunken sailor on an over-stayed shore-leave. The Dane was as wild as a March hare in the first two rounds, but the Redbirds obliged him by helping him out of the big jam in the first inning. They effected a deadlock in the second—the only inning of the series when they resembled their real selves—and then proceeded to jump through for Pipgras who held them to four hits.

From the second to the finish the senior league champions were a sorry lot. They had given Pipgras time to get a foothold and he showed them plenty. Sunny Jim Bottomley was the worst victim. The Redbird cleanup hitter fanned three times and fouled on his other attempt. So the Cards, so far, are a very poor second.

NAB TWO IN PROBE

penas had not yet been served, he did not divulge who these "big racketeers" were.

County detectives were abroad today with subpenas for these men and for many less prominent racketeers—almost 60 in all.

As the last of 39 witnesses left the grand jury room yesterday, the district attorney announced that the session had been a fruitful one.

"We made great progress," he said. "We have found much of what we're after. From the way it looks now, the inquiry will run even longer than we expected."

CAPTAINS GRILLED

During the day two police commanders and an alderman contributed to the jury's knowledge of protected vice in Pittsburgh. They were Capt. Nuncie Marino, of the Frankstown Avenue station; Capt. Harry Mellon, of the Penn Avenue station, and Alderman Ray Snyder, of the Twenty-third Ward.

Marino spent but five minutes with the jury, and left smiling. Mellon did not fare so well. His inquisition lasted for 30 minutes, and he showed signs of uneasiness.

The three witnesses were called in connection with an anonymous letter written by a "Citizen," in which the inference was drawn that certain officials had watched vice flourish on the North Side and had stood by—at a price.

Among the witnesses of the day was Justice of the Peace James Joyce of Wall borough. There were four proprietors of well-known roadhouses, and a score of saloon keepers.

A dozen witnesses left the grand jury room for further questioning under greater pressure in the county detective headquarters after they had proved too taciturn to satisfy Assistant District Attorney Andrew T. Park.

SCORES PROPRIETOR

One such—Charles H. Sauers, proprietor of the Five Mile House, West View—drew harsh words from Park.

"Take him over to the office and give him everything," said the assistant prosecutor to a detective as Sauers left the room.

Next week will bring much the same sort of grist to the jury's mill as the last, Gardner said. Saloon keepers, slot machine maintainers, gin mill operators and gamblers—privates in the racketeer army—will face the inquisitors. Here and there a "higher-up" may appear, Gardner said, but only when his presence fits into the tale of graft as it is being poured, drop by drop, into the jury's ears.

WOMEN'S CLUB SPURNS WILLEBRANDT SPEECH

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—The board of directors of the St. Paul Business and Professional Women's Association voted last night to rescind its invitation to Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant United States Attorney General, to speak in St. Paul.

Mrs. Olivia Johnson, president of the association, said the invitation was rescinded because of widespread opposition among members of the association to sponsoring Mrs. Willebrandt's visit here.

The invitation, she explained, had been sent before Mrs. Willebrandt had figured so conspicuously recently in the public press because of her political activities.

took checks for larger amounts than she wanted to deposit at a bank and was given the balance in cash which she diverted to her own use, the report stated.

The auditors said that although other employes also had access to the money they believed the girl was responsible for the total misappropriation. The girl has promised to make restitution of $6,000 representing the amount derived from the sale of her parents' home, her automobile and other personal belongings.

A stenographic report of questioning of Miss Currey by Deputy Attorney General Metzger, which was made public today, disclosed that Miss Currey and Treacy were to have been married in August, 1927, but that Treacy broke off the engagement on the pretext that he did not like one of Miss Currey's girl friends.

Miss Currey told the deputy that the real reason was that Treacy was already married and had a child. She also said he lied to her about getting a divorce.

Treacy's mother later told the investigators that her son never received a divorce and could not because of his religion.

TREACY IN WHEELING

LANCASTER, Pa., Oct. 6.—The Teachers' Protective Union, of this city, which employs J. P. Treacy, of Pittsburgh, said to have received some of the money alleged to have been embezzled by Miss Dorothy Currey from the West Chester State Teachers' College, said today that Treacy is in Wheeling, W. Va.

His headquarters, the company said, is in Pittsburgh, and at the present time he is working out of Wheeling through West Virginia on a commission basis. The company said he is 25 years old and unmarried.

Bar Gets Discipline Board

pleting 21 years on the Supreme Court bench.

These remarks gave ground for speculation that Justice von Moschzisker may be recommended for appointment to the United States Supreme Court when a vacancy occurs. His appointment was reported to have been considered once before. Senator Reed spoke of the achievements of Taft and Roosevelt after leaving the White House.

RULES TIGHTENED

Appointment of the Board of Governance, effective January 1 next, supplements the more stringent rules for admission to the bar effective January 1 last, culminating years of study in response to the demand in almost every jurisdiction of the nation that the bar and courts reconstruct much of the existing system of administrating justice, it was pointed out.

This action, and the personnel of the Board, "constitute a guarantee that from now on the privilege of registering as a law student and subsequently of being admitted to the bar of Pennsylvania will be wisely and zealously guarded against abuse by those who are not entitled to its exercises," Justice von Moschzisker said.

Moral character of aspiring lawyers is emphasized under the new rules, and admission to the bar is not limited to college graduates, he said.

VOTE ON JUDGES

Endorsement by the bar of candidates for judge by secret referendum, as inaugrated in Allegheny County, has proven successful, Mr. Stadtfeld said.

The dinner was attended by judges of the courts of Allegheny county and 300 members of the bar. The chief justices and associate justices, with leading members of the bar, sat at the speakers' table.

Yesterday afternoon in the Supreme Court chambers Justice von Moschzisker was presented with a silver plaque by his associates to celebrate his 25 years on the bench. Justice Robert S. Frazer made the presentation speech.

POURED HOT SOUP ON GIRL, TOOK POISON, POLICE AVER

Mrs. Anna Andlor, 28, of 27 Fountain street, attempted suicide last night, police say, by swallowing poison in her home. She is in a serious condition in Allegheny General Hospital.

In the same hospital is her stepdaughter, Pauline Andlor, 14, who is suffering scalds on the left leg said to have been caused when the mother poured hot soup on her as punishment.

The attempted suicide, police say, occurred after the husband and father had quarreled with his wife over the hot-soup punishment.

A disorderly conduct charge has been placed against the woman by North Side police.

COUNTY CALLS GAS STATION SHAKEDOWN, ASKS CITY AID

"Shakedown" is the motive attributed by County Commissioner Charles C. Mc Govern to the building of a gasoline station at Forbes street and Sixth avenue, opposite the approach to Liberty Bridge. His criticism was expressed yesterday at a meeting of county commissioners in the Courthouse.

Joseph G. Armstrong, chairman of the board, successfully moved that City Council be asked to halt construction of the gasoline station and thus provide easy access to Liberty Bridge.

McGovern called attention to the new structure, now nearly a story high, and recalled the movement that has been agitated in some quarters for a long time to remove Allegheny county jail in order to permit the beautification of that district and to provide space for street widening to admit an artery to a proposed bridge from Bigelow boulevard to the North Side.

McGovern did not amplify his remarks but it was obvious that he was convinced that the owner of the gasoline station under construction anticipated the necessity of the acquisition by the city or county of the site and the opportunity it would afford to force a high price for the vacation of the property.

BATTLE OVER SMITH DRUNK CHARGE ON

People Who Know Subjects :-: Like Pictures of Tomorrow's Color Gravure :-: Express Experts' Views

MRS. WILLIAM RICE

When tomorrow's Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Color Gravure is distributed, Pittsburgh will see as one of the finest pictures one of the twins, Caroline Augusta and Pearl Frances, 14 months, daughters of Mrs. William Rice, 1830 Beechwood boulevard. At a preview of the printed photograph, Mrs. Rice said it was a "very good reproduction of my little daughters" and added that "colors in the section are quite attractive."

MRS. WILLIAM D. HAMILTON

Mrs. William D. Hamilton, regent, Pittsburgh Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, paused in her work to further patriotic education to comment on tomorrow's Color Gravure. It's a fine thing for Pittsburghers, she says, and makes a very attractive feature for the Sun-Telegraph. She particularly admired color reproductions of canvases by the artists, Otto Kuhler and Christian J. Walter.

MRS. LEWIS FISHER

Mrs. Lewis Fisher, Schenley apartments, is equally as justified as Mrs. Rice in showing interest in photographs of twins. For her twins, Joan and Sally, are reprinted in tomorrow's Sun-Telegraph Color Gravure section. Mrs. Fisher said at a preview that the colors are delightful and refreshing and "I am pleased to learn that the section is to be a regular feature of the Sun-Telegraph."

MRS. FRED HENIUS

Mrs. Fred Henius is an expert when it comes to judging her husband's work. She judged it for the Sun-Telegraph from reproductions of her husband's porcelain paintings, which appear in tomorrow's Color Gravure. The Heniuses live in Cordova road and Mr. Henius is a photographic artist. His wife says the reproductions of several of his garden scenes have been faithfully carried out in their colors.

BATTLE OVER SMITH DRUNK CHARGE ON

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 6.—(A.P.)—A charge involving the sobriety of Gov. Smith and alleged to have been made last August in Indiana by the Rev. Manning E. Van Nostrand, pastor of Emmanuel Baptist Church, of this city, was a subject of controversy today between Edward G. Griffin, counsel to the Democratic presidential nominee, and the Albany minister.

In a statement issued from the executive chamber at the State Capitol, Mr. Griffin said a communication had been received there some time ago saying that the Rev. Mr. Van Nostrand had made a statement at a Bible conference in Winona Lake, Winona, Ind., that Gov. Smith "was so intoxicated when he was trying to talk over the radio immediately after he was nominated at Houston that two men had to hold him up."

Immediately upon receipt of this communication, Mr. Griffin said, the ministers visited the executive offices, at the governor's request, and was asked, in the presence of the governor, himself and George B. Graves, the governor's secretary, after the letter had been read to him, the direct question, "did you ever make any such statement about me?"

DENIES CHARGE

Mr. Griffin said the minister then asked the governor whether the writer of the letter said that he (the minister) had made the statement "directly to the writer," whereupon the letter again was read and the question repeated.

"I never said it," the Rev. Van Nostrand was quoted as replying.

Since that conference, Mr. Griffin said, an affidavit, signed by Mrs. A. J. Wickard, and sworn to September 17, last, had been received here, in which the signer deposed that on August 23, while in attendance at a Bible class at Winona Lake, she heard "one Mr. Van Nosterland (affidavit spelling) supposedly from Albany, N. Y.," make a statement substantially as quoted by Mr. Griffin from the communication he received and that the minister also said that the Governor on another occasion in the railroad station where Mr. Smith was preparing to board a train, he was under the influence of liquor and was passing it around to men and ladies in his party."

HEARD STATEMENT

Mr. Griffin's statement added that Mrs. Wickard "further says that these statements were made on a public rostrum or platform at Winona Lake, evidently with the intent of belittling the character and personality of said Alfred E. Smith."

The Rev. Mr. Van Norstrand, who has been a pastor in Albany for 10 years, gave his side of the controversy soon after he heard of Mr. Griffin's statement. He said he had not made the charge that the Governor was "intoxicated" the Sunday after his nomination, but added that at the time he was questioned about the incident in the executive chamber the Governor "did not ask me if I had made any similar statement, or if I had made any other statement concerning him to the effect that he had been intoxicated or that he drank."

When asked specific questions in Indiana concerning the nominee, the minister said he did make the statement "that I had been informed that upon one occasion when Gov. Smith had broadcast he was so intoxicated that he had to be supported by two persons."

GEORGE BEBAN, FAMED ACTOR, SUCCUMBS

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 6.—(A.P.)—George Beban, famous portrayor of Italian character roles on stage and screen, is dead.

The widely loved actor passed away yesterday when complications from uremic poison and injuries received Sunday in a fall from a horse snapped the thread of a vigorous life. He had suffered from the former ailment for some time.

Beban was born in San Francisco, where he began his stage career at the age of 8. Two years ago he retired from both stage and screen, following the death of his wife, Edith MacBride Beban, in New York City.

His brother, Lewis Beban, of San Francisco, was with Beban when he died. His 11-year-old son, George, and the actor's sister, Mary, were en route to New York as death came.

After starting out in minstrels, Beban's first stage playing of any moment was with the famous team of Weber and Fields. Probably his greatest fame came from his film work in the "Sign of the Rose," with which play he later toured the country with a cast of his own film players.

Other of his film characterizations were seen in "Pasquale and His Sweetheart," and "Jules of the Strong Heart."

During his film career, Beban acquired a considerable fortune and only recently completed an elaborate home at Playa del Rey on Santa Monica Bay.

Hoey Will Answer Clark

An answer is expected today by Director James M. Clark, of the Public Safety Department, from Inspector James N. Hoey on the investigation asked by Council of alleged "brutality" to prisoners taken by Hill district police.

The charges were made by Alderman John J. Verona, who said that several persons had been mistreated by police under Hoey.

underground steam channel of the Duquesne Light Company. When the water was high, great clouds of steam hid the front of our building."

L. LANNING, manager, Penn Theater, says:

"While the water didn't quite reach us last spring, it would require little more to send us hurrying for protection."

WILLIAM C. RIGLER, manager, Bessemer Building, Sixth street and Duquesne way, says:

"Certainly protection from the river floods is very necessary. Our building is water proofed and we have installed costly pumping equipment, but it seems there must be a way to keep back the waters and protect those others who cannot afford the equipment and whose properties are seriously damaged."

WILLIAM D. CLASTER, superintendent, West Penn building and West Penn annex, Wood and Water streets says:

"We get between 6 and 8 feet of water in the cellars of our building on an average of three times a year. Pumps and crews to man them are necessary for every flood. Do we favor river walls? Well, we favor anything that will protect our properties from the inroads of the river at flood stage."

WILLIAM T. MUELLER, Watson Paint and Glass Company, 101 Wood street, says:

"We get water in our cellar and have no facilities for keeping it out. Of course, sometimes it's not bad, but it is a nuisance."

G. A. SCHULDICE, assistant treasurer of Heeren Bros. Co., Penn avenue and Eighth street, who expects to live to see the flood waters reach Fifth avenue and Smithfield street if nothing is done about it and who has advocated some sort of flood control for years, says:

"It is a mighty serious damage this flood business. It is an expensive proposition, this continual pumping and battling of high water. Something must be done about it and I agree with Mr. Burchfield that a half million or a million dollars of damages result every time there's a flood. Because we have had no flood as disastrous as the one in 1907 since that time, is no assurance. The worst may come at any time, so to speak."

JOSEPH L. MITCHELL, superintendent, Speer Building, 118 Sixth avenue, says:

"We certainly need river walls or some protection from the ravages of the river at high water. When we hear the river is rising, we have to remove everything from the cellar. After the water disappears there is a cleaning job—in all floods cost us a pile of money."

ZEPPELIN U. S. FLIGHT SET FOR TUESDAY

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND.
Special Cable Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1928, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Oct. 6.—"By the time the storm area now over the Atlantic, in which even great steamers are reported to be in distress, clears up, which I figure will be about Tuesday or Wednesday, the Graf Zeppelin will be all clear to start for America," said Commodore Eckener yesterday as we bent over the weather charts together, with Capt. Hans C. Flemming.

Capt. Fleming has charge of the weather and wireless service on the giant airship. Capt. Flemming will make up two "Atlantic weather charts "daily from wireless reports. These charts are laid before Commodore Eckner in his preparation for the trans-Atlantic flight.

The coming of transocean air traffic promises to bring back the type of weather sharps that disappeared with the vanishing sailing vessel. The old "sea dogs" will be replaced by "air dogs" who have the smell of wind and weather in their nostrils. That characterizes Dr. Eckner who the other day on the long flight again demonstrated his uncanny knowledge of the weather.

"The Graf Zeppelin is not a fair weather ship," he said again today. "Don't create that impression. Our big Zeppelin can stand rough blows. She demonstrated that on our long flight, but of course I am not going to pick out the worst day to start for America. We are not going to deliberately stick our nose into storms that I can see before me.

"That is a great advantage which airships have. We do not have to buck through storms. With our speed, which is three times that of an ocean liner, we can dodge the storm areas. We can go around them or even run away from them. We can navigate on the darkest night or in the fog or clouds."

PASSENGER LIST CLOSED

The passenger list closed today with the cabins full, and with several persistent applicants more than there is room for. Some have attempted to bring political pressure to get aboard. One party presented a letter from President Coolidge written some 10 years ago, as evidence of importance.

The passenger list is headed by Count Brandenstein Zeppelin, son-in-law of the late inventor of the Zeppelins; Herr Brandenbirg, chief of the German air ministry Lady Drummond Hay, the only woman to cross the Atlantic on this first trip. The men passengers will number 18. The air ministry has reserved two other places, but there is such a lively contest in Berlin for those places that the names of the successful government representatives have not yet been announced.

Weather Conditions.

The disturbance that was centered over Lae Superior yesterday and which produced the showers throughout the Ohio Valley states and the Lakes region, moved rapidly into the Northeast. It is now beyond the field of observation. High pressure is dominating the weather over much the greater portion of the country this morning, with centers over the Ohio valley and over the northern plains and the Northern Rocky Mountain states; highest barometer, 30.30 inches at Cincinnati, Parkersburg and Pittsburgh, and at Rapid City.

As a result of the high barometer, clear skies prevail nearly everywhere. It is cooler than yesterday east of the Mississippi, but over the northern plains it is slightly warmer.

River Conditions.

The rivers are still stationary at low stages, although light showers were general yesterday. Stage at Pittsburgh is 9.7 feet; Dam No. 2, 8.6, and Dam No. 6, 7.6. The dams are up.

LOCK HAVEN HOTEL MAN, AARON KYLER, DIES AT 81

LOCK HAVEN, Pa., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Aaron Kyler, pioneer hotel man, died at the home of his son, John B. Kyler, yesterday. He had been ill for about six months. Had Mr. Kyler lived until November 22, he would have been 81.

CIRCUS MONKEY BITES 2 BOYS; HELD BY POLICE

"Fuzzy," the ferocious little monkey of the L. Z. Shows menagerie, has been taken off display for the next 10 days because he bit two little visitors who came too near his quarters on the show grounds at Penn and Braddock avenues.

Lloyd Dixon, 8, of 6917 Thomas boulevard, and James Griffin, 10, of 6807 Kelly street, are the victims.

The Dixon boy visited the circus, held under the auspices of a local fraternal organization, on Thursday afternoon and was bitten on the left wrist. Griffin was bitten yesterday afternoon while at the circus grounds. Police ordered the animal held under observation for 10 days. The boys were treated at the Pittsburgh Hospital.

FIRST AD PRIZES AWARDED, 1,000 MORE LEFT

SUN-TELEGRAPH TO PRINT LIST TOMORROW

Look for the winners of the prizes for the first weekly period in the Zain advertisement writing test for amateurs in The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph tomorrow.

Look for the prize winning ads in The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Monday.

And in the meantime keep on writing ads; for THERE ARE NEARLY 1,000 PRIZES, INCLUDING ONE OF $1,000 AND FIVE OF $100 EACH, YET TO BE WON.

Apply yourself over the week-end to writing ads for the Zain test. Avail yourself of your leisure. A little work, a bright idea, may bring you rich return.

ORIGINALITY COUNTS

Do not feel that you should wait to see the prize-winning ads of the first period before preparing your own ads for the second week. The ads to win the later prizes may be of an entirely different character. Do not slavishly imitate. Use your brains. Get up something original.

Bear in mind that you do not have to know anything about the technique of ad writing. Professionals are barred. Keep on trying. You will improve with practice.

The Zain Ad-Test is a game. Play it. Get your friends to play. Compare notes. Write Zain ads as a pastime at parties.

RULES LAID DOWN

Read the rules. They will be found elsewhere on this page. Write about the 39 participating business concerns, a list of which will also be found on this page. You must write an ad about each of them sometime during the campaign to be eligible for the $1,000 prize.

In writing about the Lewin-Neiman Company, 305 Smithfield street, bear in mind that they are specialists in women's, girls' and children's coats. The greater part of three floors of their store is given over exclusively to coats. Visit it and see for yourself their attractive and moderately priced garments.

A point that might be effective in writing your ad for the Duquesne Light Company is that it is not only new houses that can be thoroughly wired and so opened to all the various household services that electricity renders. Old homes may be re-wired from top to bottom at comparatively small cost and trouble.

HINTS FOR WRITERS

NEED DIRE IN STORM ZONE, ASK $60,000 HERE TODAY

Will Pittsburgh contribute $60,744.38 today for the half million hurricane sufferers in Florida and Porto Rico?

This question has been put up to the public by the American Red Cross and every possible effort is being made to raise the money before today's sun goes down.

Receiving startling news of conditions of famine and epidemic facing the storm victims in Porto Rico and the need for rehabilitating 12,000 homeless families in Florida, Chairman A. K. Oliver, of the Pittsburgh chapter, yesterday sent telegrams to scores of prominent Pittsburghers asking their help in completing this district's quota of $150,000. Early contributors have been asked to increase their gifts.

Contributions of $2,118.50 yesterday raised Pittsburgh's total to $89,255.62, leaving $60,744.38 to be raised.

PITTSBURGH CONCERN TO CONSTRUCT VIADUCT

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Oct. 6.—The Pitt Construction Company of Pittsburgh, yesterday was awarded a contract for $280,604 to build a viaduct at Ohltown, Trumbull County, in connection with creation of another water supply for Youngstown and Niles. The Pittsburgh company also has been given a contract for a causeway to cost $144,000.

5 Stills in Zone Competition Keen, Dry Agents Assert

Prohibition agents raiding in Braddock yesterday found bootleg competition keen when they raided five places within a radius of several blocks.

In a dwelling at 118 Third street, Braddock, a 50-gallon still was reported found, while directly across, at 117 Third street, one of 15-gallon capacity was declared seized.

At 509 Sixth street, a 40-gallon outfit and at 627 Margaretta street, a 50-gallon still were confiscated, agents said.

The fifth raid reported was a store, 109 Third street, in which was found a half-gallon of moonshine, they said. All were released on their own recognizance.

NEW U. S. BUREAU TO HELP SELL OUTPUT HERE

The Pittsburgh district will be helped in finding markets for its surplus production through the activities of the new district office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Senator David A. Reed told the Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon held yesterday to celebrate the opening of the branch here. Lower freight rates resulting from completion of the canalization of the Ohio River will help to effect the same object, Congressman Stephen G. Porter asserted.

Senator Reed and Congressman Porter were the guests of honor. Dr. Julius Klein, director of the bureau, scheduled to address the meeting, was unable to attend.

SEES AID TO WORKERS

"Ill health and unemployment are the two greatest misfortunes that can come to men," Senator Reed pointed out. "Through the activities of the bureau the leaders in the Pittsburgh business can be apprised of opportunities to keep ahead of foreign rivals. This will keep unemployment in Pittsburgh at a minimum.

"The proposals for farm aid are part good economics and good sense, but mostly good politics," said Senator Reed. "Some Pittsburgh businesses are as much in need of government help as the farmer, but we cannot get up much excitement about coal aid."

PORTER SPEAKS

Congressman Porter, one of the foremost American foes of international drug trafficking, said he had just received word that the Indian government has yielded to the American position and adopted the American policy on the drug question. "India has been one of the most troublesome spots in the drug traffic," he said.

"We of Pittsburgh have a surplus industrial production of 7 to 10 per cent which we must dispose of in foreign markets. We can meet lower wages abroad, but we have not met lower-cost transportation. The last of the dams on the Ohio River will be completed within a year, which will make the Ohio River the greatest waterway in the world."

In speaking of the help which the bureau can be to industry, Congressman Porter said that possibilities for trade with the Orient were enormous.

John Mathews, Jr., assistant director of the bureau, spoke in place of Dr. Klein. He said that 7.8 per cent of the production of Pittsburgh is exported. This employs about 5,100 men, whose families include over 20,000 people.

"We are after the town hall, we are making progress in other directions," he explained, "and this new hospital, by all odds one of the finest in the country, will be a great credit to us. We are going to have it. I think I can promise that we shall all work earnestly to make it a reality."

A brief talk also was made by H. L. Mason, Jr., vice president of the hospital, who spoke of the early beginning of the hospital and of the many residents of other sections who, from humanitarian motives, had kept the institution facing forward.

Pittsburgh could not be disappointed in its first concert. Fritz Kreisler, master musician, incomparable violinist, unparalleled entertainer, came once more to Carnegie Music Hall, and thoroughly pleased an audience that filled the hall.

The program was singularly lacking in the classics. Perhaps that is why the usual Kreisler breadth of tone was absent as well. Instead, this artist is leaning more each year towards a spirit in his music which is entirely Viennese.

Whether he chooses a spirit in his program from the music of Scandinavia or Spain, of the Russian steppes or Balkan highlands, whether his music is in miniature or a more pretentious model, all he plays is tainted, alluringly tainted, with his own ingratiating personality, itself delightfully Viennese.

In the Grieg Sonata, Kreisler avoided all heorics. It was blond music, pale and with blue eyes. I believe that Grieg, nearly always a creator of miniatures and a lover of the Mozart style, tried for grander effects in all his sonatas. Kreisler gained these effects in his cantilena rather than in his bowing.

All during the winter we shall remember the Ravel, and be bound to compare tone quality to the beauties of these two sketches.

Kreisler's arrangements of the Dvorak songs and dances are welcome additions to the violinist's repertory, and fortunately avoid sentimentality.

Carl Lamson, as always, was the reliable accompanist.

BYRD BROADCASTS

EXPLORER SAYS FAREWELL TONIGHT

The Sylvania Foresters, one of the most popular of radio entertaining groups heard on the air today, tonight will participate in the closing session of the third annual radio show in Duquesne Garden. Their program will go on the air from the antenna of KDKA at 9:30 o'clock.

Another feature from KDKA tonight will be a farewell program at 11 o'clock in honor of Com. Richard E. Byrd, as he prepares to sail on the S. S. Larsen from San Pedro, Cal. This program also will be broadcast by KYW and KFKX at Chicago, and WBZ-A, Springfield, Mass.

Don Bestor and his recording orchestra, playing in the William Penn Hotel, will provide the music program, followed with a farewell message to Com. Byrd from H. P. Davis, vice president of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, the "Father of Radio Broadcasting;" C. W. Horne, superintendent of radio operations of the Westinghouse Company, and several messages to members of the expedition from relatives and friends. At the conclusion of the messages Don Bestor and his orchestra will complete the program.

The Philco Hour, formerly broadcast on Wednesday evenings, will begin a new schedule for the winter, starting with the broadcast tonight at 8 o'clock through KDKA. As heretofore, an operetta by Victor Herbert, featuring Jessica Dragonette and Colin O'More, directed by Harold Sanford, will be the feature of each program. "The Red Mill," a musical piece in two acts, with book and lyrics by Henry Blossom, first produced at the Knickerbocker Theater, New York, in 1906, will be the feature of this program.

Another Lucky Strike Dance Orchestra will be heard at 10 o'clock tonight. Again the large dance band, said to be the biggest ever heard over the radio, will perform in the New York studios of the National Broadcasting Company, while merry-makers throughout the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific dance to the same music. The complete program follows:

"Imagination," "Oh, Baby," "Sweet Sue, Just You, "Without You, Sweetheart," "Hawaiian Medley," "Everybody's Doing It Now," "Ballin' the Jack," "Mr. Dooley," "Beloved," "The Shadow Song," "Who Wouldn't Be Blue," "Two Lips," "That's My Weakness Now," "'Cause I Feel Low Down," "Just Like a Melody Out of the Sky," "Sleep, Baby, Sleep," "Havana," "Underneath the Stars," "No Parking."

RADIO EXPOSITION ENDS SUCCESSFUL RUN TONIGHT

Pittsburgh's million dollar exposition of radio equipment, which has been in progress all week at Duquesne Garden, comes to an end tonight. The radio fair, the third annual one here, which was sponsored by the Pittsburgh Radio Trade Association, in every instance outshone its predecessors.

The Sylvania Foresters, nationally known radio entertainers, will furnish the entertainment program for the closing session tonight. Feature numbers will be played by Torre, violinist, and Divbano, accordionist. The DeLuxe Petite Symphony Dance Orchestra will play, the program being broadcast from 9:30 to 10:30 o'clock by WCAE.

Several of the 130 exhibitors have surprises in store for the spectators at tonight's session.

CENTURY BLDG. OFFICE AFIRE

Several persons were routed from their offices in the Century building, Seventh street, last night when fire broke out in the Fort Pitt Textile Company offices on the sixth floor. Damage was estimated at $10,000. Persons in adjoining offices sent the alarm.

Dense smoke from the windows drew a large crowd in Seventh street and in Penn avenue.

Contents in the assembly room of the Typothetae of the Pittsburgh District, adjoining the burning shop, suffered slight loss.

The cause of the blaze, which did damage of $2,000 to the textile shop, could not be determined.

Water seeping through the floors damaged the offices of the American Mond Nickel Company and the Pittsburgh District Dairy Council to the extent of $1,000.

GIMBEE FAMILY AT SHOW

The regular weekly Gimbee Family party of WCAE will be held today at the Radio Show at Duquesne Garden from 3 to 4 p. m., instead of in the studio.

The entire program will be made up of juvenile entertainers: Rosaline Leff and Rita Mundt, a twin act; Paul Bousau and Mildred Segall, novelty singing and dancing; Julia Miller, violinist; the red-haired twins, Philip and Sidney Magidson; Unk, the clown. Cousin Lora and Uncle Gimbee will preside at the "mike." The DeLuxe Petite Symphony Dance Orchestra will have a big part in the program.

PITTSBURGH SYNOD TO OPEN MONDAY

Ministers of the Pittsburgh Synod, Reformed Church in the United States, will meet in Greenville, Pa., on Monday for the fifty-ninth annual session of that organization. Sessions, to be held in Zion Church, the Rev. Paul J. Dundee, pastor, will last four days. The Rev. Dr. A. First National Films To Be Made With Vitaphone Sound Effects and Dialogue

By REGINA CREWE.

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 6.

NOW that Warner Brothers own the First National Studios, it is announced that all First National productions will be synchronized with Vitaphone. Not only will every one of the Warner First National Pictures be an "audible," but each will have dialogue. Both sound and silent versions of all pictures will be made. The silent ones to be shown in those theaters which have not yet been wired for Vitaphone.

This means that you will be able to hear as well as see all First National stars. And these include Colleen Moore, Dick Barthelmess, Alice White, Billie Dove, Corinne Griffith, Milton Sills and Dorothy Mackaill. Six plays have been purchased by Al Dockett, general and production manager of First National, for rendition into screen vehicles. Barthelmess, incidentally, will sing a song in his next picture, "Weary River."

More than $1,000,000 worth of sound equipment will be installed in the Burbank studios within the next 90 days. One sound stage is practically completed and two more are to be erected.

Don't faint! Clara Bow has asked Paramount for a year's vacation. And you'll never guess the reason! Clara declares that she is fed up with being a screen star and wants to get married and have a family, just like other girls! Of course, poor little Clara will do no such thing. She'll stay right on at the Paramount studios and keep right on making pictures that gross lots and lots of money at the world's box offices. But I think that Clara's many fans will love her all the better for knowing that in her heart she has just about the same ideas and ambitions about life that are held by other less famous girls in Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, where Clara comes from—and all the other towns in the country.

Jerry Rudolph, who is the strong right arm of Winnie Sheehan, Fox film sachem, is back in the Fox fold again after a brief fling at fan magazine editing. Jerry and Robert J. Flaherty have been sent down into Mexico to discover some unknown Del Rio, or Velez, or Torres, to star in a Fox photoplay which calls for a Latin heroine.

It will surely be a sad parting when Sue Carol bids adieu to Nick Stuart and comes home alone to Hollywood while Nick must remain abroad to complete chasing through Europe.

Universal's "Show Boat" is so nearly completed that Laura La Plante is beginning to think about the role she will act following the screen birth of "Magnolia." Laura's new one is called "Little Miss Satan," and Laura, judging by the title, is cast as a cute little devil. Wesley Ruggles is to be intrusted with the direction.

[illegible] are being made on the [illegible] the production of [illegible]" which Harry Pol[illegible] picture will hav[illegible] dialogue, and Universa[illegible] its best to persuade Edu[illegible], last of the minstrels, to appe[illegible] it.

Gertrude Howard, one of the most capable colored actresses on the screen, has been signed for a role in Colleen Moore's picture, "Synthetic Sin." Gertrude will portray Colleen's Negro "mammy," and doubtless do it as well as she did "Queenie" in "Show Boat" and "Chloe" in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Montague Love also is in the cast.

All of Warner Richmond's many friends were very worried upon learning that the capable, youthful "menace" had suffered injuries to his hands which threatened to necessitate their amputation. The hurt was sustained while Warner was "heavying" in a picture at Columbia. But latest reports are that skilled physicians have patched the mitts up so that they are, or soon will be, as good as ever. Columbia ran into a tough break with four persons injured in a single day.

William Haines will take a New York vacation before he begins work on his new picture. When he leaves Broadway, Bill will journey down to the old home town in "Ole Virginy," where he will gather his mother to his arms and bring her back to Hollywood with him. Bill's new film, you remember, is "The Duke Steps Out." After that he will make "The Gob."

Alice White's picture, "Ritzy Rosie," which Mervyn Leroy, the kid director, is megaphoning, will have plenty of fine screen artists in its cast. George Stone, Doris Dawson, Thelma Todd and Rose Dione are all in it, and Jack Mulhall is Alice's leading man. "Ritzy Rosie" is almost finished. "Bluffers" will be produced immediately, and then Alice will make whoopee during a New York visit, which will include a look in on that dear Paterson, N. J., where she lived before she was famous.

SATIRE, MUSIC IN BILLS

"The Guardsman," the Ferenc Molnar satire which opens in the Nixon Monday night as the third Theater Guild production of the Pittsburgh season, was a failure when it was first presented in New York. It lasted two weeks as "Where Ignorance Is Bliss" and was not presented again until several years later when the Theater Guild produced it as "The Guardsman."

The Shuberts have recalled Ivan Servais from Europe to again appear in the role of Count Sharntoff, when "Blossom Time" comes to the Alvin for a week beginning next Monday night.

The mystery comedy, "The Skull," will be presented in the Pitt Monday with the production and cast that appeared in the Forrest Theater, New York. The action of the story takes place in an old-fashioned church near Greenwich, Conn. and it is said to be full of thrills and chills.

Paxton, a man with the photographic mind, will give an exhibition of his skill in the Davis next week. In school, it is said, he was never known to miss a date in history and there was never a word he could not spell, provided he had once seen it written.

The principal feminine roles of "The Singing Fool," starring Al Jolson, coming to the Stanley screen next week, are enacted by Josephine Dunn and Betty Bronson.

William Haines, in 'Excess Baggage," will be on the Penn screen next week. The stage show is to be presented under the title of "Blossoms."

"The Air Circus" is to be the feature of the Aldine screen program next week. Sue Carroll and Arthur Lake have the principal roles.

"Oh Kay," Colleen Moore's new farce, opens in the Grand and Liberty Monday. Laurence Gray is the leading man.

Vaudeville in the Harris next week will include Ray Shannon & Co. The two screen features will be Laura LaPlante and Glenn Tryon in "Thanks for the Buggy Ride" and Rex Bell in "Girlshy Cowboy."

Among the special features in "Moulin Rouge Girls," next week's burlesque in the Academy, is La Belle, a French dancer.

Among the vaudeville attractions at the Sheridan Square next week will be Herbert Rawlinson, famous screen star, who will appear in person in a skit. The two screen features will be Laura LaPlante and Glenn Tryson in "Thanks for the Buggy Ride" and Sally Phipps in "None But the Brave."

ORGAN RECITAL PROGRAMS

The first program of the free organ recitals for the season of 1927-28 will be given by Dr. Charles Heinroth in the Carnegie Music Hall at 8:15 o'clock tonight. This marks the beginning of Dr. Heinroth's twenty-second year as organist and director of music at Carnegie Institute, and the thirty-fourth season of free organ recitals. The program for this evening includes: Overture to "Tannhauser," Wagner; Andante Cantabile from Quartet, Op. 11, Tchaikovsky; "Sportive Fauns," D'Antalffy; symphonic poem, "Les Preludes," Liszt; "Kol Nidrei," Old Hebrew, arr. by Bruch; Airs de Ballet from "Alcesfe," Gluck-Saint-Saens; Farandole from L'Arlesienne Suite," Bizet.

The first Sunday afternoon recital of the season will be at 7 o'clock tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon. On the program will be: Overture to "Ruy Blas," Mendelssohn; Reve Angelique, Kamennoi Ostrow, Op. 10, No. 12, Rubinstein; Arabesque No. 1, Debussy; symphonic poem, "Finlandia," Sibelius; aria from Orchestral Suite in D, Bach; Allegro, First Movement from Sixth Symphony in G Minor, Widor; Ronde d'Amour, Westerhout; Triumphal March from "Sigurd Jorsalfar," Grieg.

SUPREME COURT JUDGE HONORED

Before the Pennsylvania Supreme Court finally rose yesterday, having completed its work here, Justice Robert Frazer, on behalf of his colleagues on the bench, presented Chief Justice Robert Von Moschzisker a silver platter in recognition of 25 years of judicial service on the bench.

The following cases were argued the final day:

James Bashford against the West Miami Land Corporation, an appeal from the decree of the Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny county.

Ad-Lee Company, an Illinois corporation, against M. Meyer, from the decree of Common Pleas Court of Allegheny county.

Michael J. Burns against Peter Coyne, appeal from decree of the Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny county.

George Mayar, administrator of the estate of John Mayar, against the Pennsylvania Railroad, appeal from order of Common Pleas Court of Allegheny county.

SYNODS TO SEND DELEGATES

The Pittsburgh and Allegheny synods of the United Lutheran Church are preparing to send representatives to the sixth biennial convention of the church to be held in Erie, Pa., October 9 to 15.

The gathering will mark the tenth anniversary of the merging of the three general Lutheran bodies, the General Council, the General Synod, the United Synod of the South. Delegates will attend from all parts of North and South America, representing a membership of 1,400,000 and 3,000 pastors. Delegates also will be present from the Evangelical Lutheran Church in the Andra country of India. Sessions will be held in the Luther Memorial Church of Erie, the Rev. Maclay Gearhart, pastor.

PRIZES IN HAND :-: WON :-: AND TO BE WON

Clarence Badger, left, receives from Jesse L. Lasky a silver medal, which accompanied a $5,000 prize for the second best Paramount picture shown in the Paramount Theater, New York, "It." Joseph Von Sternberg is receiving the first prize gold medal that went with $10,000 for "Underworld."

Jascha Heifetz' prize is Florence Vidor, screen star, and hers is the noted violin artist. Photographed when they returned as Hollywood's newest bride and bridegroom.

When Wallace Beery wants a prize trout all he has to do is to step out of his mountain home and let the trout know he is waiting. He even fools his hunting dogs who don't know he has no gun. Wallace flies between his cabin home and the Hollywood studios in his own airplane. Some system!

COUNTY TO BUY 3 CARS FOR WORKS DEPARTMENT

Shadows of Santa Claus were observed yesterday when county commissioners approved requests for three new automobiles for county employes.

Advertisements were authorized for a five-passenger sedan for Norman F. Brown, director of the Department of Public Works, and for two five-passenger cars for his engineering bureau.

Brown said the county car he was using was beyond repair and that he was forced to use his own car but that it was not adequate for the work required.

The commissioners forwarded to Paul B. Riis, superintendent of county parks, a communication from Jens Jensen, of Ravinia, Ill., stating that he would supervise the installation of swimming pools in the parks for five per cent of the cost of the projects. He would need $100 and expenses if it were necessary for him to visit the job, the letter stated.

Reports from John Francies, county treasurer, that the balance in the county cash drawer last August 31 totalled $16,732,755.85 were "received and filed"

Debut Customs Become More Elastic With Buds Being Introduced to Society at Either Tea or Dance

AT one time, not so long ago, the procedure for bringing out one's daughter was definitely established, and eyebrows were raised at the very thought of alterations in the custom. You know it as well as I do, of course—the tea given by the mother, and later, usually during the holidays, certainly sometime in December, a big dance with the debutante's parents as hosts.

But during the last few years, many parents have dispensed with either one of the other of these parties. Most of the rigid rules of formal entertaining have been made a little elastic, and it is considered quite sufficient now to have a tea or a dance or a combination of both.

Marian Stone is one of the girls who will make her debut this year at a dance. Her father and mother, former Judge and Mrs. Stephen Stone, of Forbes street, are going to give the party the Friday night after Christmas, December 28, in the University Club.

A WEDDING over East which is of keen interest to Pittsburghers took place today at noon in the Walnut Street Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, when a local man, Thomas Morrison, Jr., son of the Thomas Morrisons, took Sarah Mary Barnes, daughter of the John Barneses, of "Four Winds," Haverford, for his wife.

Mr. Morrison, who is a brother of Mrs. John S. McKelvy, Jr., of the Schenley apartments, you know, is not planning to bring his bride here to live. I understand that they have taken an apartment at Haverford Mansions, Haverford, and will live there after they get back from their wedding trip abroad. The "at home" date is December 15.

For her wedding today, Sarah wore ivory white Lanvin satin made with long tight sleeves finished with printed cuffs of pearls and rhinestones, and having a deep girdle of the same stones. The train fell from the waistline and also was studded with pearls and rhinestones, while the tulle veil was arranged with a cap of similar gems, fastened with a band of tulle under the chin. She carried calla lilies and orchids.

Mr. Morrison's sister, Mrs. Henry Vance Maxwell, of Trenton, N. J., was matron of honor, and Sarah's own sister, Amy, was maid of honor. They wore bouffant models of Nile green taffeta made with long tight bodices, and instead of hats they wore caps of foliage green maline with bands of green feathers. They carried orange cockscombs, red roses and yellow orchids.

Frocks of beige taffeta made with bouffant skirts edged with orange and tight bodices, were worn by the bridesmaids, and their headdresses were of autumn brown. Nan Fitler and Mrs. Donald Stephens, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Nathaniel P. Hill, of New York, and Rachel Barnes Hartzell, of Cincinnati, Sarah's cousins, were her bridesmaids. The little flower girls were Betty Fownes Scammell, of Trenton, another cousin of Sarah, and Gail Murray, of Princeton, Mr. Morrison's niece. They wore Kate Greenaway costumes of peach chiffon with poke bonnets to match, and carried baskets of sweetheart roses.

Robert Taylor Morrison, of Pittsburgh, was his brother's best man and the ushers included Harry Vance Maxwell, of Trenton; Charles Edward Murray, Jr., of Princeton, John S. McKelvy, Jr., Norwood Johnson, Jr., Raymond St. Leger Babcock and Henry C. Fownes, II., Sarah's cousin, all of Pittsburgh; Robert Otto, of New York, and Thomas Barnes, II., and John Barnes, Jr., Sarah's brothers.

After the ceremony there was a large reception at "Four Winds."

Austen will be solemnized in November. Mrs. Taylor and her honor guests received in the lounge room of the club, and the luncheon was served in the solarium. THE woman voter's interpretation of the 1928 presidential campaign and particularly the woman voter's gratification in the unusual qualifications of both presidential candidates, will be the theme of the Voters' Service program Tuesday to be broadcast under the joint sponsorship of the National Broadcasting Company and the National League of Women Voters.

Two speakers, Mrs. Caspar Whitney, of New York, and Mrs. Arthur Ringland, of California and Washington, who are identified actively with the two national campaign committees, are scheduled. ASK NEW TRIAL FOR SLAYER

Asserting that the court erred in permitting a wife to testify against her husband in a murder trial, Attorney Jacob Schulgold argued before Judges James B. Drew, Charles M. Culver and J. Frank Graff in Criminal Court yesterday for a new trial for Thomas Terihaj, now serving a life sentence for the murder in the first degree of Steve Ceranovich.

Ceranovich was killed with a hatchet September 17, 1927, in the Terihaj home, in a quarrel over the defendant's wife. At the trial she was permitted to testify as to her own character, which had come into the question. Following that, she was asked to describe the killing, and she told how the two men had battered each other, her husband using a hatchet. Assistant District Attorney John F. Haggerty cited precedents for the woman's testimony.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

OVER LOVE'S BARRIER

By BERTHA R. M'DONALD

MERLE CAVENDISH loved Jimmy Dalton with all her heart; loved him so much that she would willingly have gone through any hardship to be his wife and after reaching that much-to-be-desired place, was sure she could face and conquer anything with Jimmy by her side.

Furthermore, Merle was certain that Jimmy loved her. He had been persistent in his attention for ever so long, but nothing ever seemed to bring him any nearer the goal Merle was longing to reach.

Having finally satisfied herself as to just what was keeping Jimmy from asking her to join him in launching an unpretentious barque upon life's great uncharted matrimonial ocean, she decided to take matters somewhat in her own hands and see what could be accomplished.

Jimmy and two other fellows kept bachelor's hall together. They were everlastingly getting into altercations over the household accounts. Bob was the efficiency expert — made out the budget, which Jerry, who did the buying, was always running over. Jimmy was the houseman. He got the arguments both going and coming and was in the habit of relaying them to Merle when he wanted sympathy.

The very next time he came after Merle had made her momentous decision, he was unusually quiet about what had been going on in Bachelor's Hall and seemingly not a little cast down in his attitude toward life generally.

Sensing intuitively something of the situation and having made up her mind exactly what she was going to do, Merle proceeded to press Jimmy for the customary details of his home life.

"Oh, Jerry ran over again," Jimmy answered rather disconsolately, "and when Bob got after him as per usual he declared that with the prices of things as they are he couldn't run the place on a cent less. That led to our argument."

"Tell me about it," Merle demanded.

"Oh, Jerry began by saying that no girl would marry a poor man—that is—if she had any good sense. He said she'd be a dub if she let herself in for having to pinch pennies and that he'd never make a girl suffer as he'd suffered trying to keep the darn bills down where Bob and I thought he ought to. Said it hampered his soul or something like that."

"Just what was your answer to that, Jimmy?" Merle asked with poorly concealed interest.

"I simply told him that the more I thought about it the more I was convinced that he was right. No man has any right to tie a girl down to drudgery and poverty, not even if he loves her better than anything else in all the world!"

"Why James Murray Dalton!" ted Merle indignantly. "What you think girls are such ry, self-seeking creatures t? Why if I—er—if a girl really cares fc a man, of course, she'd be ready to make crifices!"

"Possibly you would," Jimmy replied admiringly, "but you must remember that you're a most unusual—a—an exceptional girl. I —I never have known a girl just like you, Merle."

"Well, I certainly hope you'll tell Jerry how wrong he is," she retorted vigorously. "He must have gotten mixed up with some terribly selfish girl at some time in his life to have gotten such foolish notions in his head. Why, it would be fun to shop and plan and see how far I—how far one could make the money go; that is, if a girl really likes a man enough to—I'm speaking impersonally, of course."

"Of course," agreed Jimmy, "and I suppose—anyhow, Jerry said he wouldn't think of asking any girl to marry him until he was making at least five thousand a year."

"Five thousand a year!" echoed the astonished Merle. "Five thousand is a princely salary. If we —if young people had to wait until the man was earning that much I'm sure—they'd be gray haired before they could marry. Of course there are some girls who would want a large apartment right from the start. They'd want to order everything by phone and keep a maid and they'd grumble if they didn't have a car, but any girl with a man's best interests at heart would—"

"Say," the admiring young Jimmy interrupted, "I just wish Bob and Jerry could hear you talk. It would make them ashamed of themselves. You see, none of us are making over fifty a week and do you know what those grouches said? They insisted that even if they were engaged to a girl and a man came along with a sizy bank roll—one who'd pick out their fiancee to smile upon, they'd quit her cold in simple justice to the girl. I'm here to tell you that they gave me the indigoes with such talk."

"Why didn't you argue that point with them, Jimmy?" Merle asked softly, tracing the patern in the rug with her shoe.

"I jolly well did!" Jimmy answered tensely. "I told them I'd bet them a dinner that I knew one girl who was an exception to their cynical old arguments only—only I wouldn't have the nerve to prove it until I got the raise I know is due the first of the month. They laughed and said that proved their point."

"Merle—my darling!" breathed Jimmy rapturously. "Do you really mean that? Could you—will you —Oh Merle!"

"Jimmy Dalton!" gasped Merle, lending herself to his rather close embrace with a little catch in her breath. "Do you mean—are you by any chance proposing to me? Why I never dreamed of such a thing!"

"I've got a pile of nerve," pressed Jimmy shyly, "but I guess that's exactly what I'm doing. What's the answer, Merle?"

"Maybe—well—I think I'll say yes, Jimmie dear, but you're certainly giving me the surprise of my life!"

Fliers Held By Mud at Mandalay

(Great anxiety has been felt for the safety of Baron von Huenefeld and his pilot, Charles Lindner, who flew from Calcutta to Mandalay three days ago on their way to Tokio in their round the world flight.

They returned to Calcutta after a first attempt, being forced to repair their plane. As recorded in the Baron's dispatch Wednesday, their second hop to Mandalay was successful. Since then nothing has been heard from the Europa.)

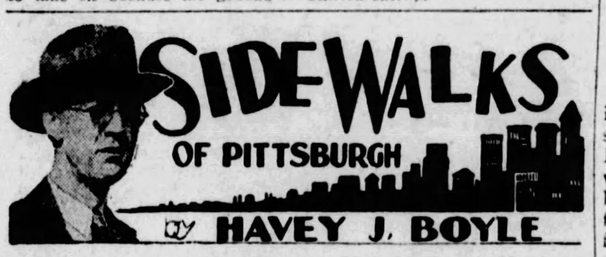
MANDALAY, Oct. 5.—Radio via Berlin.)—I should have built an ark for this trip, as we have been marooned here several days due to a steady downfall of rain.

Ever since our arrival here, Lindner and I have found it impossible to take off because the ground is only a mass of mud and in spite of our efforts we have been unable to find a place to start from.

I am beginning to see the significance of Kipling's flying fishes here.

We hope to be able to leave for Canton shortly.



COMES to the sidewalks of Pittsburgh frequently John Morrison, member of the Pennsylvania Workmen's Compensation Board, publisher of a newspaper in Greenville, Pa., ("the" paper in Greenville, Pa., as Mr. Morrison would say) and a man whose hobby has been tracking Lo, the poor cigar Indian, now well-nigh extinct.

Not so long ago John Morrison was telling some of us his adventure in tracing the origin and the rise and fall of the wooden redman and at the conclusion we suggested that we might write something about his research. Mr. Morrison then revealed that he had submitted his story to Scribner's Magazine, which publication readily purchased Mr. Morrison's attractive history. The article is published in the October Scribner's.

HOW scarce the well-known symbol of the tobacconist's shop has become is revealed in the statement that Chicago, Brooklyn, Minneapolis and Baltimore have but one each, while such centers as Pittsburgh, New Orleans, Cleveland, Washington, Los Angeles, Boston, Denver, Detroit, Atlanta and Louisville have none at all.

It seems here that a few years ago in front of a chaste, restful tobacco shop conducted by a veteran stogie maker, Reisenstein, in South Eighteenth street, Pittsburgh, there stood a noble brave looking somewhat resolutely into space, but this last of the Mohicans, too, apparently has traveled into the shadows for he no longer is to be seen.

* * *

MR. MORRISON has made a meticulous search and has come up with a wealth of entertaining facts concerning his subject.

Why did merchants of various lines go in for symbols such as the wooden Indian? It is Mr. Morrison's theory that in a less literate age it was necessary to advertise by symbols rather than by writings, because, unfortunately, only a small number knew much about reading and writing. He points out, and one can still see evidences reflecting the old custom, how a butcher shop proprietor told the customers he had meat for sale by suggestively exhibiting a bull's head or steer horns just atop his front door. The furrier resorted to a bear in front of his store; the saddler always had a horse in his lobby; gentlemen who sold clothes had a dummy to display the attractiveness of the $12.50 coat, vest and pants, and jewelery stores still entice you with a twenty minutes after eight clock or one that actually runs.

WHAT brought the demise of the wooden Indian, Mr. Morrison points out in his article, regulations clearing sidewalks of such advertising impediments. Such fires as occurred at Baltimore, Chicago and 'Frisco also had much to do with the sending many of the lumber redskins to the happy hunting grounds.

We are sure Mr. Morrison would be interested in hearing about any wooden Indian history with a Western Pennsylvania background. Any authority submitting data will know that his information will be dispatched at once for the voluminous archives of Mr. Morrison, of Greenville.

Poll Gives Hoover Indiana

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1928

INDIANANS GO HOOVER

By CHARLES N. WHEELER, (Noted Political Analyst).

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Indiana might as well be placed definitely in the Hoover column this morning. Except for the Democratic managers, this conclusion is shared by practically every competent observer who has covered the state.

It is so set forth in the Hearst poll. The figures today are:

Hoover	19,883
Smith	14,728
Hoover lead	5,155
Hoover percentage	57.5

This canvas is representative of the state. It has covered particularly all of the larger cities, as well as cut across strictly farm territory where the aggrarian revolt has been most marked.

Shortly after the start of the Hearst nation-wide pool Mr. Hoover took the lead. This increased steadily as the canvass was pushed out over the state.

DRAWS FROM BOTH

While the situation in the Hoosier state as of today is obscured somewhat by the confusion produced in the wild battle for state offices, the crystalizing of the reform sentiment in both parties is all Hoover in the National arena.

What conceivably may happen in Indiana will be the election of Frank Dailey, Democrat, to the Governor's chair and the winning of the electoral vote by Mr. Hoover by a very large margin.

Mr. Hoover, even the Democratic chiefs admit, is infinitely stronger than the Republican organization in this state. He is far and away the outstanding figure before this electorate. Weak as the Republican state ticket appears to be, his indicated lead on November 6 may be of such size as to pull the state candidates through by a squeak.

Many of the independent newspapers of the state are advocating support of Hoover and Dailey. Nowhere in the state, except in the steel mill and refinery section along the Lake Michigan shore, is there any Republican defection worth noting, so far as Hoover goes.

DEMOCRATS SWITCH

On the other hand, virtually all reform elements in the Democratic party, while making the welkin ring for their candidate for Governor, are lining up behind Hoover in preference to Smith.

Outside of Lake county and the Hammond-Whiting sector, present indications are that Hoover will run ahead of the Coolidge vote. There are a few spots out in the state where his vogue will be severely checked, but as a general swing the downstate territory is veering to the G. O. P. candidate.

The south half of the state was conceded to Hoover at the start by the Democratic managers, lagerly because the women voters expressing a preference for Hoover in unprecedented percentages and without regard to past party affiliations.

Herald and Examiner canvassers, supplementing the postcard poll, have just returned from a tour of the north half of the state outside of Lake county.

In only Plymouth, Hartford City and Decatur is Gov. Smith shown standing up in a toe-to-toe battle with Mr. Hoover.

WOMEN'S VOTE COUNTS

The canvassers report the same story as to all the other places—Hoover leading slightly in the men vote but getting 2 to 1 of the women registrants.

The general sentiment among the women voters, they report, is that corruption in government will have a very slim chance with Herbert Hoover in the White House.

While not questioning Gov. Smith's personal honesty, they do not entertain the same degree of confidence, it is reported, in the Tammany organization that is backing the Governor.

NOOSE PUT ON PRIEST

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Oct. 6.—When a noose was cast around his neck and drawn tight as he responded to the doorbell of his parish house here, the Rev. John Roskosz, pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, rolled out on the sidewalk, and after a battle overpowered his attacker.

WOMAN FOUND STRANGLED

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Her head battered with a hammer, her hands bound with handkerchiefs and her neck noosed by a towel, the body of Mrs. Annie Staats, 52, was found last night in the bathroom of the lodging house she operated on North Sixteenth street. Police believe the woman had been strangled before her slayers wielded the hammer, which was found in a corner of the bathroom.

Two aged women tenants told the authorities they had seen a well-dressed man, about 25, talking with Mrs. Staats about a room when they left the house to do some shopping.

The women said the victim kept valuable jewelry and considerable cash in the house.

LAY BURNS TO THEFT

One boy was burned seriously and his companions narrowly escaped similar injury when one of the three lit a match, police say, while they were stealing gasoline from a truck parked in Preble avenue, North Side.

This is reported today by police who investigated the mysterious blaze which did $500 damage to the truck of Harry Gamble, of 2026 Metropolitan street, Wednesday night.

Lieut. Harry Hatters and Patrolman Frank Smola last night arrested John Conway, 14, of 2027½ Laurel street, who with Richard Wadlow, 16, of 1309 Warner street and another boy are alleged to have been stealing the gasoline. Wadlow is confined to his home suffering severe burns.

Police say Wadlow, in addition to being burned, also cut his right hand when he broke the glass of a fire alarm box to send in an alarm.

7 MEN, 8 GIRLS ARRESTED BY RAIDERS

Three alleged disorderly houses were raided early this morning by North Side police and 15 persons arrested, including eight women. Not satisfied with one visit to a residence at 11 Federal street, the police returned three hours later and arrested two women and a man. Earlier in the night they had arrested two other women and a man in the place. Mannie Jones and Hattie Wilson were charged with being the proprietors.

The other raids were made at 509 East Robinson street and 919 Federal street. Mary Smith was charged with being the proprietor of the East Robinson street address, where police arrested another woman and a man. Four men and two women were arrested at 919 Federal street. John Glover was charged with being the proprietor.

TEACHER INSULTED, PUPIL STRIPPED, RUBBED WITH IVY

AMITYVILLE, N. Y., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—A high school student was kidnaped by five classmates, who stripped him and rubbed poison ivy over his body because of a supposed insult to his teacher, it was revealed here when the kidnapers were restored to their classes yesterday at their victim's request.

The kidnaping took place more than a week ago, after Miss Edna Yates, the teacher, told her brother, Fleming, that she thought it was Charlie Wright, 15, of Copiague, who had insulted her.

With four classmates the brother seized young Wright, threw him into an automobile, took him to a nearby woods, stripped him and rubbed him with ivy.

The five, suspended from school when Wright's mother told the story to Principal Arthur W. Ruff, were reinstated when Wright was sufficiently recovered from the ordeal to return to school and intercede for them.

Two of the five, Richard Stratton and Frank Burch, had fled town after the incident. Their families have received word from them that they are looking for work in Wilmington, Del.

It is not known who was responsible for the insult for which Wright suffered.

N. J. RATE STRESSES BUS FARE EXCESS

More evidence that Pittsburghers are being overcharged on the "luxurious" 25-cent busses, while other cities have good service for 5 to 10 cents, appears in a letter from F. M. Walters.

"I have been reading the letters published in your paper in reference to the bus fare and service in other cities. I have not seen Jersey City, N. J., mentioned.

"That city has a bus supervisor, who is appointed by the Mayor. He has a number of inspectors, who check on all bus lines in the city. The bus lines have a schedule and must live up to it.

"The Central avenue line is six miles long, has 26 busses, and a five-cent fare is charged. The Southern boulevard line is 14 miles long and the fare is 10 cents. All the other lines are from five to eight miles long and the fare is five cents.

"Almost all of the busses are of the new type, large, roomy, clean and comfortable.

"I have never been in a street car in Jersey City, as a bus line is always available, and I never saw a passenger standing in a bus on the 'Joisey Side.'

"All of the bus lines in the city are independent and are not controlled by the trolley company."

DEMOCRATS EYE VOTE CHEATS

Steps were taken yesterday at a meeting of the legal committee of the Allegheny county Democratic organization to guarantee a clean election on November 6.

At a meeting in the Fourth avenue headquarters a group of lawyers organized to keep "dirty politics" away from the polls next month. Urban A. Lavery, of Chicago, director and counsel on election laws for the National Democratic Lawyers' Committee, addressed the group.

Last night the Smith campaign was carried into Troy Hill and Bellevue. Frank Andres was chairman of the Troy Hill meeting, which was addressed by Mrs. Margreete Minnetti, Mrs. J. Wood Clark and Attorney James O'Connor. The Bellevue meeting was addressed by Miss Anna Madden, Miss Margaret Reardon and Attorney James L. O'Toole, Jr.

ACQUIT DOCTOR IN ATTACK

ALTOONA, Pa., Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Dr. William P. Harlos, of Altoona, was acquitted of charges of attacking Thomas Dailey, former Brant House clerk, in a retrial in Blair County Court yesterday. Dr. Harlos, with Harry Hart, hotel owner, and Rufus Armstrong, theatrical company manager, had been convicted of assault last March, and Hart and Armstrong are now serving penitentiary terms for the attack, committed December 19, 1926.

Dr. Harlos appealed from the verdict of the local court and after the case had been carried to the State Supreme Court, was granted a retrial. Testimony at the second trial established an alibi for Dr. Harlos, it having been shown that he was not at the Brant House at the time of the attack. The jury was out two hours.

Will Rogers Says

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 6.

I been hearing appeals over the radio for funds and I thought sure it must be for Florida or Porto Rico or some equally deserving cause but, come to find out, it was the Democratic campaign treasurer seking first aid.

Nights when the candidates don't talk over the radio, why, their treasurers do, asking for money to pay for the radio for the next night for the candidate.

Both parties have got to a point now where they will take old clothes or second hand cars or anything.

There is peculiar charities in this country.

Yours, WILL ROGERS.

STOLEN LOVE by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Joan Hastings and Bill Confess Their Love For Each Other

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Joan Hastings, 17 and beautiful, lives a secluded life with her two old maiden aunts in a house long run to seed. Aunt Evvie, discovering that Joan has visited a dance hall, angrily reveals to her the story of her unmarried mother's tragic love affair and death. Joan, alone in her room, clasps to her heart a miniature of her mother and refuses to believe she was anything but good. Aunt Evvie buys a cheap automobile and engages Bill Martin, a garage worker, one day a week to care for it. Bill, looking up from his work, sees Joan watching him from her window.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

LONELY! The ache of it pressed down on her like a great weight on her head. Recesses that were once too short, stretched to eternity. Days lasted forever. The memory of yesterday's slight rankled, and the dread of tomorrow's were almost more than she could bear.

"It's mostly because I look so funny. If I had a new dress they couldn't laugh at me anyway. I'll ask Aunt Evvie—"

It took courage to ask Aunt Evvie, but she finally did. "I'd make it myself—it wouldn't cost much. Cotton crepe, Aunt Evvie, and the pattern I want doesn't take much goods!"

Aunt Evvie, a little late for the sewing circle, didn't even answer. She just gave Joan a withering look, and strode past her to the front door. "Hurry, Babe, if you're coming! You're always so slow."

And Babe, snubbed because the frizzing of her hair had made them late, turned peevishly on Joan. "I should think you'd be ashamed to ask for money now, with everything going out, and nothing coming in," she said. "Besides, you look very neat and nice, the way a young lady should look. Most of them look like—chorus girls!"

"You might water the rose garden!" Evvie flung over her shoulder as she cranked down the stairs. "I think you might do that much around the house without being told!"

"You'll never have to ask me again—I—I'll flood it!" Joan muttered making for the patched old hose that had been stored in the stable during the rainy season. She winked hard to keep back the tears. It wouldn't have cost much for a blue crepe dress. If your own family would rather have you look like a scarecrow than spend two dollars on you . . .

It was almost dark in the old stable. She had to climb over the car to reach the hook where the garden hose was hung. She scraped her shin against the fender, and tore her nail. The tears came. All the stored-up tears of days and weeks and months. Tears for her bleeding finger, for Hilda, for the horribly shiny blue serge, and the boy who looked at her in the sunset and didn't mean it.

She sank down on the running board of the car. Oh, the relief of it! The relief of being able to cry all alone in the dark, with Aunt Evvie and Aunt Babe both out, and no one to know—

No one to know. She could cry as much as she liked, and she did. An orgy of grief.

And into it, all unsuspecting, walked Bill.

He walked in to get Miss Van Fleet's second-hand car, and he almost fell over the weeping girl. He would have fled, but Joan heard his step, heard him stumble back to the door. She looked up and saw him. With a tremendous effort she swallowed her sobs, and made a few ineffectual dabs at her eyes.

"I'm—I'm crying!" she said rather unnecessarily. She meant it as a sort of apology. "I forgot it was Wednesday."

"Oh—that's all right," he murmured, feeling foolish.

"I'd stop, but I've used up all my handkerchief," she wailed, and hid her streaked face against the side of the car. "If you'll just go away—for a minute—"

Bill backed to the door. There was something so helpless, so childish in the girl's bent neck, in the ruffled glory of her curly hair, in her very abandonment and tear-streaked dustiness that his own embarrassment melted.

Bill reached in his pocket and brought out a large, clean handkerchief.

"Here—take this one—"

She looked up through wet, thick lashes, and reached out a timid hand. Their fingers touched. Her slim body was shaking convulsively, she buried her nose in Bill's big white handkerchief and cried afresh.

Gingerly he steadied her with his hand. Almost automatically he sank to his knees beside her. His arm had slipped around her.

CHAPTER IV.

FEMININE tears were no novelty to Bill. His married sister, Eunice, was what old Mrs. Martin complacently referred to as a "champion crier," but she never cried like that.

"You—you weren't sick or anything?" he ventured nervously. "Can't I call somebody—or something?"

"Oh, no—no—I'll be all right in a minute—"

The sympathy in the boy's voice, his concern for her, completely overwhelmed Joan, who had never, in her 17 years, received any. With a little grateful sigh that was half a sob, she snuggled closer to his protecting arms.

And so big Bill Martin, who had never cared much for girls, and little Joan Hastings, who had never known any boys, found their first shy love in each other's arms.

"Water the rose garden," Aunt Evvie had said. A task to fill Joan's idle afternoon, and its consequences filled her whole life.

Bill hadn't the time for girls. He had been struck with Joan's beauty when he first saw her framed in the red velveteen curtains that first afternoon. She haunted him, as a bar of music, or a line from a poem can haunt one, and all the next day as he went about his greasy chores in Gerwin's Garage he thought of her, slender and gold and remote in the window. But she lived in "the Van Fleet mansion," and she was only a kid. He would never had thought of her as a possible sweetheart. Big Bill Martin was almost 20, and had worked on the docks.

Nor would Joan have made the first advances. They might never have known each other had he not come upon her that April afternoon crying in the old stable.

Were they really strangers? Joan looked up at him through wet, thick lashes. Her seagreen eyes were deep pools of wondering tenderness.

He hadn't meant to kiss her, not even when she talked about the fairy tale, but she was so near, her sweet mouth was so soft and red. Their lips met, then Joan drew back in sudden fright. "Oh—why did you?" she whispered.

"Well, I guess I better get busy on the car," he said with forced cheerfulness. "That's what I was sent around here to do—be losing my job if I don't look out." And then, lower, anxiously, "You—you aren't angry—are you?"

She shook her head. "No—not angry—"

He squeezed her slender hand in his brown paw. "Then it's all right. Say, can I use the hose on the car?"

"To wash it with? Oh, yes. And I'll take it when you're finished."

They went out together, and Bill screwed it to the leaky faucet near the south hedge.

"I'll hold it for you!"

"Oh, no—"

"But I want to!"

In the end he let her, and then he dragged it back to the rose garden for her, and returned to the car to finish his work.

From her place in the garden Joan could watch him. She saw him in a golden mist. Already she was fitting him into all her bookish dreams.

How hard he worked on Evvie's car. His khaki shirt was open at the neck. She had never noticed that boys had pretty necks before. Well, not pretty exactly—but nice. How blue his eyes were. Dark hair and blue eyes—

"My father had dark hair and blue eyes!" she called to him across the bushes.

"Did he?" The color rose in the boy's freckled face. He stole another look at the girl in the sun. "Your hair is awfully pretty!" he said. It was his first compliment. He had never had a girl.

A warm blush climbed to the roots of her crinkly gold hair. "Do you think I'm pretty?" she asked, very low.

He nodded, embarrassed again. He had never had a girl, but he had never heard of a girl like this one! Like some sort of a shy wild thing, bold one minutes, and getting ready to run the next. And how lovely she was, all gold and ivory and slender. . . .

With a convulsive movement he stuffed the rags he had been polishing the car with under the seat. "See you next week. Boodby—" And he fled.

The rose garden was soaked. Joan was winding the hose when the aunts came home after the meeting of the Sewing Circle.

"I don't think I'll care for much dinner," Aunt Babe was saying. "Mrs. Thomas always serves such rich refreshments."

"Did the boy clean the car?" Aunt Evvie demanded, making for the stable.

Joan went on winding the hose. Her eyes were starry. There was a radiance over her that did not come from the last slanting rays of the afternoon sun.

"Yes—he was here," she said.

"Well, it looks pretty good." Aunt Evvie came out and bolted the heavy door. "New brooms sweep clean."

Something in the pose of Joan's lithe blue figure, something in the way the sunset glorified the burnished, wind-blown hair made Evvie catch her breath sharply. It was as if she were seeing Joan for the first time, seeing the ivory and rose of her youth, her round slenderness, her delicately perfect profile.

Curls Return to Favor

Drawn by Dorothy Flack

FASHION NOTE: "Femininity is once more the style. Curls are returning to favor, along with ruffles and bows and frillier styles. The boyish bob is a thing of the past and the newer fashions show a marked return to the reign of Femininity."

Now what more could one ask? After all the talk we've been hearing about "What will come of it all? Why won't girls be girls instead of boyish looking creatures that goodness only knows where they'll stop when it comes to styles?"

Oh, well, pack away the sighs in lavender and old lace. Or, better still, pack away the sighs and get out the lavender and old lace from the bottom of great-grandmother's funny little trunk and be thoroughly modern and up-to-date.

You know the pendulum never swings so far but that it just naturally HAS to swing back again. And that's what has happened to fashions.

Curls will again fall in soft frames around fair lovely little faces. Ruffles will billow and flow like softly babbling brooks. Laces and ribbon bows, and miles and miles of frilly things are again to the fore! So hats off to the old-new girl—the sweetly feminine, curly headed loveliness whom we thought had gone forever!

WHEN A MAN UNDERSTANDS WOMEN

MY DAUGHTER, hast thou met "The Man Who Understandeth Women?" For if his words be true his name is legion!

Verily, verily, since Adam first discovered that Lilith possessed "no SOUL," the Understanding of women hath been the favorite pastime of men.

Wherefore, then, doth the man who professeth to "understand women" show forth such folly and lack of judgment in his choice of a wife? For, alas, he is always married to a woman who doth not understand HIM!

HELEN ROWLAND

Alas, alas, she doth not understand that his ardent glance at the blonde flapper is only the disinterested glance of a student!

She doth not understand that his moonlight tete-a-tete with the titian-haired widow on the hotel piaza is merely for experimentation and sociological research.

She refuseth to "understand" that when he taketh his new stenographer to luncheon it is only to study her soul, to get her psychology and to discover her viewpoints upon office efficiency.

She cannot comprehend that when he gazeth after the bathing beauty with the perfect legs it is not with admiration that he gazeth, but with disapproval or scorn or purely academic interest.

She will not believe that the tender caress which she saw him bestow upon the clinging damsel between dances was given but as a mental test, to discover whether or not the critics tell the TRUTH concerning the modern woman's kissability.

Nay, she will NOT perceive that his glowing "line" is only a scientific experiment for plumbing the depths of woman's soul and weighing her reactions in the balance!

She is SO obtuse!

He knoweth every woman's emotions by heart and all her hidden potentialities are clear unto him. Yea, he can play upon any woman's heart with one hand and his eyes closed. All women are as one woman unto him—and that one easier to read than a word of one syllable!

Verily, verily, in all the world there is only ONE woman whom he doth not "understand!" And that is his WIFE!

For, though he may have dwelt in the house with her for 20 years, she is still a painful problem and an unsolved riddle unto him.

Yea, she is the Weaker Vessel, filled with complexes—and suspicion!

Horoscopes

Sunday, October 7

SUNDAY'S horoscope promises an important change or unexpected journey or removal attended by great activity and initiative, or probably excitement. New projects are involved and are well fortified, providing that proper consideration as to finances be observed in the making of contracts. Small worries and delays should not hamper the encouraging prospects.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a year of lively events and unforeseen benefits, with unexpected change, travel or removal. New ventures are in order under high initiative, but it would be well to give contracts close scrutiny as to financial loopholes or hazards. Small delays or worries should not depress.

A child born on this day may have many talents and qualities making for success and good position either in original, inventive lines or with the public.

Monday, October 8

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for many conflicting situations, but at the same time holds the reward of many substantial and enduring benefits for past application, industry and perseverance under difficulties. Labor and employment are under propitious signs, but change, speculation and personal affairs are under doubtful sway. Particular precaution is enjoined in the signing of all manner of writings or documents.

Those whose birthday it is may expect to reap many benefits during the year for past efforts, industry and patience. But they are advised to refrain from all manner of financial hazards and to sign all writings with unusual caution. Likewise preserve and cherish domestic and romantic affiliations.

A child born on this day may be steadfast, industrious and persevering, but it should be taught to shun speculation and to be rigid as to veracity and probity.

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By ADELE GARRISON

The Men Reach the Farm at a Critical Time

AT my whispered call of "Father!" the figure leaning heavily against the wall below my window, straightened itself and father's beloved voice spoke in the low tones which carry no farther than a whisper when he uses them.

"Yes, Margaret, darling. Let us in quickly, quietly by the side door."

"At once," I whispered back, and turning groped my way to the mantel where I keep my flashlight, and then with it lighting my path, I unlocked my door and waiting only to lock it after me, for Lillian's injunction was still strong upon me, I hurried across the hall and down the stairs, confronting Lillian's astonished and disapproving face at the foot of them.

"Father is outside, below my window with somebody else—he wants me to let him in immediately."

She wheeled and hurried with me to the side door on the veranda which my father had mentioned, characteristically saying nothing until I unbolted it, and admitted my father.

"Margaret!" he exclaimed, and starting away from the support of the other man's arm, he put out his arms and I went into them with the feeling that Life suddenly had brought me an inestimable boon.

Subconsciously, I heard Lillian's whisper behind me. "Wait until I lock the door." Then she ejaculated fervently: "Praise Allah! Allah be praised! Where on earth did you and the chief drop from? And what medium did you consult to discover that you were especially needed just at this minute."

"My dear Lillian!" Allen Drake's voice drawled—although I had not yet looked at his face, I had known since my first glimpse of him that it was the brilliant, debonair agent of the diplomatic secret service, my father's right-hand man, who had come back into my life—"I am afraid we have not been worrying about any need of yours. We have had enough cause for disquiet on our own account. Steady, Chief!"

His eyes had been as quick as mine to see the sagging of my father's figure against me in utter weakness. His arms went under my father's shoulders, relieving me of the weight, and the next second he had lowered him into the chair which Lillian's quick perceptions—and hands had provided.

"A glass half full of water!" he said, and Lillian whirled toward the door.

"I'll get it," she said. "Stay with your father, Madge!"

I looked fearfully at Allen Drake as my father's body slumped closer against him.

"He is all right," he assured me in a low tone, "except that he is utterly spent with fatigue. He has been ill, ought to have been in bed days ago, but we had to keep going until—certain—things were done. Now he can rest—for a few days at least."

He was fumbling in his pocket as he spoke, and when Lillian came back he handed her a tablet.

"Dissolve," he said, and when the draught was ready he held the glass to my father's lips. All three of us stood motionless, tensely watching, until my father lifted his head two or three minutes after the draught.

"I—am—so—ashamed—" he said, the old indomitable spirit breaking through his weakness of body.

"Don't, Father!" I exclaimed, but Lillian eased the tension with a laughing gibe.

"Can't you let him be ashamed if he wants to?" she demanded. "Come on, Chief! I prescribe a bed for you immediately. We can hear your Odyssey in the morning."

But my father looked at Allen Drake with compelling intensity.

"The car" he said. "Hidden at once Remember! No one must know we are here"

How to Keep Well

By Royal S. Copeland, M. D.

Lost Vision Danger Greatly Reduced.

ONE of the many cheering things about modern life is the great number of organizations established to lessen disease and to promote the usefulness of the Individual. Among such institutions is the "National Society for the Prevention of Blindness."

DR. COPELAND

Not long ago it was my pleasure to read the twentieth annual report of this society. It is really amazing to learn what strides have been made towards the goal of eyesight conservation.

Twenty years ago the infected eyes of new-born babes were the chief cause for loss of sight. Nearly one-quarter of all cases of blindness came from this one ailment—"ophthalmia neonatorium," as it is called. Less than one-half as many cases are met today.

This is gratifying indeed. It shows that better maternity care and preventive measures at birth have had their results. But we must not be satisfied until this disease as a cause for blindness shall be completely removed. It is scientifically possible to accomplish this. The national committee will not be satisfied until that is done.

The report to which I have referred shows how important it is to eliminate the eye hazards in industry. It is estimated that of the 100,000 blind men and women in the United States, approximately 15 per cent lost their sight while engaged in one or another of the many forms of industrial activity.

It is good to know that most employers of labor are co-operating in this commendable effort to save eyes and eyesight. More and more efforts are being made to prevent accidents, particularly those which are liable to damage the eyes.

Proper lighting is essential to safety. By this I mean that there must be light enough to make clear all the details of the work and of the machinery, so that the worker may keep track of everything about him. Then, again, it is just as important to regulate the light so not to produce harmful glare.

When I tell you that more than three millions of persons are engaged in industries most of which present serious health and accident hazards, you can see how important it is to guard them against harm. The activity will mean much in saving good eyes and eyesight.

Another activity of the committee is its campaign against trachoma. If you had seen as many cases of this disease as I have, you would rejoice that systematic efforts are being made to do away with it.

Trachoma is known to the public as "granulated eyelids." In certain sections of America, particularly in the mountainous regions of the South, it is very prevalent.

The National Committee is carrying on an extensive program, attacking at its source this mutilating and painful disease. Let us wish them well and aid all we can.

Nothing makes for more unhappiness than the dreadful calamity of blindness. Whatever reduces that dread affliction is worthy of our applause.

Pretty Manners Not Vital, Says Fay King, for Happy Marriage

By FAY KING

SOME girls are completely captivated by a fellow who wears smart clothes and is quick at shoving chairs and holding wraps. But if the girls would trouble to investigate into the more important matter of his willingness to work, they might discover that many such young men are too lazy to hold down a good job.

Nice manners don't matter so much after you are married to such a fellow, and don't know where your next meal is coming from. Many men are completely fascinated by a girl who always looks so smart. But many a man has found after marriage to such a girl that she still steps out looking just as lovely, but he is living on canned goods and the beds are never made!

ROUSING WELCOME FOR CARDS

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

BEST IN PITTSBURGH — SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1928 — ELEVEN

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

STAFF CORRESPONDENT.

Cards Must Take Tremendous Brace if They Expect to Overcome Yankee Lead—Attack of National Leaguers Poorer Than That of Pirates Last Year—Gehrig Is Home Run Hero—Hafey Is Series Puzzle—Hornsby Likely to Play for Cubs

ABOARD WORLD SERIES BASEBALL SPECIAL, EN ROUTE FROM NEW YORK TO ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—Unless Bill McKechnie's Cardinals take a tremendous brace and show a great change for the better in playing form, particularly in the batting department, the world series of 1928 seems fated to result in the biggest upset that has been chronicled in connection with the annual baseball derby since the Chicago Cubs, after being made 10 to 4 favorites, went down before the white Sox in 1906. Before the present series opened the great majority of baseball men looked for a decisive St. Louis victory on account of the crippled condition of some of the New York players and the loss of such valuable men as Pitcher Herb Pennock and Outfielder Earl E. Combs. But since the post-season debate got under way the dope has been spilled 40 ways. In spite of their crippled condition, the Yankees have played the proverbial rings around the Redbirds, and the latter have made an even poorer showing than the burnt-out Pirates made against the Hugmen in their full strength last fall.

Lou Gehrig.

THE attack of the Mound City outfit has been the weakest seen in a world series in many years. In the two games played so far the Cards have made only seven hits all told, off Waite Hoyt and George Pipgras, and four of those seven safeties were made by two men—Jim Bottomley and Frankie Frisch. A club's outfielders as a general rule represents a large part of its attack, but in the case of the Redbirds this fall their fly chasers have been dismal failures in the offensive.

Only one hit has been made by a member of the picket line in two games, that being credited to George Harper. Chick Hafey and Taylor Douthit have been helpless at bat. Hafey has been particularly weak at bat and his work in the field has been below par in addition.

IN ALL fairness, it is true, considerable credit must be given to Pitchers Hoyt and Pipgras for the weak showing made by the Cards at bat, but with due allowance made for their part in the sad developments for the National League representatives up to date, the fact remains that the St. Louis hitters have conducted themselves like a bunch of minor leaguers. They have hit at the wrong pitches and let the right ones go by without taking their bats off their shoulders, and at practically every stage they have been outguessed and crossed up by the opposing hurlers, under the smart handling of Catcher Bernie Bengough.

THE pitching also has been below normal on the side of the Redbirds. Lefty Sherdl did not get going properly on Thursday until the game had been lost, and yesterday Grover Cleveland Alexander was a complete bust.

"Old Pete," starting the second game of the set, strove valiantly under the weight of his 41 years to equal his performance of 1926 against the same opponents, but he was both wild and ineffective, and of the 17 Yankee batters who faced him before he was dericked in favor of Clarence Mitchell, no fewer than 10 got on the bases through hits or walks.

In view of his showing yesterday, Alexander cannot be counted upon for much help during the rest of the series, so that if McKechnie is to save his club from an utter rout and put it in the running by an immediate brace, he will have to depend upon Jess Haines and Flint Rhem. Mitchell finished well yesterday, but his work was wasted and he will not be able to come back for several days even if McKechnie is willing to take a chance on him as a starting flinger.

Clarence Mitchell.

ALL of which does not make the outlook any brighter for the Cards. The batting situation makes their chances look poor enough, and if the pitching is also to fail them, it may be only a question of a very short time until Miller Huggins' name is added to those of John McGraw, Frank Chance and Connie Mack on the list of managers who have won two world series in succession.

The Yanks hold a great advantage now with the first two games stowed away in their lockers. It means that they have only to win two games out of the next five (if five are found necessary) in order to capture the big battle again, whereas, for the Cards to win out McKechnie's men will be required to win four straight or four out of five.

IT CAN happen in baseball, just as anything else can happen in the most uncertain of all sports. The Yanks themselves have experienced that, as they were beaten by the Giants in 1921 after shutting McGraw's tribe out in the first two games. But it will require a vast and immediate change in the form of the St. Louis club to make victory possible.

The Cards may still have a fighting outside chance if they pull themselves together and play as they did during the regular season, but if they do not show any more than they have uncovered thus far, it would be an act of mercy to throw in the towel right now.

YOU'VE got to hand it to those Yankees, even though the opposition that they are up against has been by all means the toughest ever known. Yesterday victory gave them a record of having won six world series games in a row, and no club could achieve such a feat unless it had a lot of championship qualities of its own. It wasn't always the weakness of their opponents that enabled the Hugmen to win during that stretch of six successive triumphs.

SEEMINGLY Babe Ruth will have to suffer the breaking of both legs before he will cease to be a menace to an opposing club. It was figured that the Bambino's damaged prop would prevent him from approaching his old marks in this series, but while he has not yet hit any home runs, he has been the leading batter of the series. Up to date he has made five hits (only two less than the whole St. Louis club) in seven times at bat, which gives him the fairly good average of .714.

LOU GEHRIG was the home run hero yesterday, his four-base smash with two on in the first inning giving the

ENGINEER HUGGINS OPENS THROTTLE WIDE FOR QUICK FINISH

Here we have a sample of what a photographer and an artist can accomplish when they collaborate on a work of art. This is an off-day in the world series while the Yankees and Cardinals are traveling to St. Louis, where play will be resumed tomorrow, but that's no reason why an action picture of the day should not be available. The Yankees are going along under full steam with two victories and no defeats and threaten to rout the St. Louisans even as they did the Pirates, in four straight battles, last year. They have the Cardinals on the run as a result of having held them to seven hits in the two battles so far played. Above we see Manager Bill McKechnie of the Cardinals yelling for a halt after having missed the fast through train due to stumbling over the two defeats; Alexander wearing a shiner as a result of his rough treatment in yesterday's game, in which he twice was rudely assaulted, being batted out the second time; Gehrig and Ruth sitting pretty with their fine hitting; Manager Huggins pushing the old iron horse along with all the power at its command, and, last but not least, the famous Mr. One-Eye Connelly riding a la mud to the new scene of combat, no world series being complete without his presence. The world series special arrived in Pittsburgh at 2:30 this morning and continued its journey five minutes later.

PARADE FEATURE; SCALPERS PROFIT

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—The roar of airplanes and dirigibles as well as the blare of brass bands and plaudits of the multitude will follow the St. Louis Cardinals this afternoon on their home-coming parade through downtown streets.

Store windows are ablaze with the Cardinal colors and posters while pictures of the team and individual players vie for attention.

Arriving on a special train from New York about 4 o'clock this afternoon, the Cardinals, making their first appearance in St. Louis since September 12, when they departed on their final road trip which ended with the National League pennant tucked away, will be whisked through private entrances at Union Station to decorated automobiles.

LANDIS TO HEAD PARADE

Commissioner Landis will head the parade, with the Cardinal players, two in a machine, following.

A dozen airplanes from local airports and Army dirigibles from Scott Field will float overhead as the procession follows its brass bands through the streets. The celebration fund was at $2,000 today and the homecoming committee expected to receive $1,000 more.

The New York Yankees, arriving on another special train about the same time, will not take part in the parade.

HOTELS CROWDED

Hotels, some of them with boosted prices, show capacity reservations, with extra beds and cots ready to be pressed into service.

Seven ticket brokers have obtained licenses and are buying tickets from persons who received reservations. The current price is $20 to $25 for a single seat to the three scheduled games, while one resale of $50 for two seats for Sunday was reported.

BETHANY AND ASHLAND IN LOCAL BATTLES

By JESS CARVER.

WILD-EYED sport folk will take a day off from peering at scoreboards to see how the Yanks and Cards are making out and hike out to the football bowls, stadiums or what have you this afternoon to watch the college boys as they put on the second big act of the 1928 grid season.

Pittsburgh games include the Pitt-Bethany affair in the Stadium and the Tech-Ashland fracas at Forbes Field. It depends on who you are as to how you'll regard the tussles. If you are disinterested, you'll probably classify them as setups for Pitt and Tech. If you are a student at either school, you'll naturally call 'em tough ones. If you're from Bethany or Ashland, you'll rate the boys a uniform and teach them a prayer.

BISONS HAVE BIG TEAM

One thing, when this Bethany club trots out on the field the boys will look at the biggest team in the district. It was its great weight that enabled them to hold Wash-Jeff scoreless for the entire first half a week ago. Pitt, ragged against Thiel in the Panther inaugural, has been working hard during the past week to correct the faults of opening day, and may put a team on the field this afternoon as good as last week's was poor. They'll need to if they are to score impressively over the Bisons.

Ashland, opening the season two weeks ago by losing to the Slippery Rock State Teachers, staged a comeback last week and defeated Wooster College, one of the strong Ohio Conference elevens. This would indicate that the visitors at Forbes Field have something more than good intentions. Tech went well against stubborn Westminster at Youngstown last Saturday, and with a week of drill behind them, should show to even better advantage today.

The Durable Dukes, who proved their durability by beating Slippery Rock 9-0 last week, are in Scranton today where they will meet Jack Harding's St. Thomas College eleven in their second game of the season.

ST. THOMAS TOUGH

St. Thomas won recognition as a tough team to beat by holding the vaunted Temple U. machine to a 12-0 score in their first game. The game was played on a field sodden with rain, slippery and muddy. St. Thomas, giving the heavy and powerful Temple team, which was only beaten once in 1927, a hard game, figures to beat the Dukes, despite the fact that Duquesne showed fine defensive strength against Slippery Rock.

Waynesburg invades Washington for the annual game with old Wash-Jeff, W. and J. a 21-0 victor over the heavy Bethany eleven last week, figures to top W[illegible] beater by St. Canisus at Buffalo. But Waynesburg is always dangerous, and with a powerful line and several lettermen back in the lineup who did not play at Buffalo, may fool the Presidents.

Down at Beaver Falls, Bucknell and Geneva will seek to gain a decision after their 0-0 tie last fall. Geneva, scoring a 75-0 win in their first '28 start, should be a favorite over the Bucknellians, who were hard pressed to beat Schuylkill 7-0.

WESTMINSTER VS. ALLEGHENY

Westminster and Allegheny clash in an important minor college battle at Wilmington. These elevens also played a scoreless tie a year ago, and both are seeking a triumph today, the scoring of which will go a long way to boosting their respective tri-state championship claims.

West Virginia Wesleyan is in Gotham for a game with New York University. Thiel plays Juniata at Greenville. Grove City, the last tri-state college to open its season, meets St. Francis at home.

An intersectional game of color and class is booked for Wheeling, where Ira Rodgers sends his West Virginia Mountaineers into battle with the crack Haskell Indians. This is one of the first major intersectional frays of the year.

CHILLY SAUCE By CHILLY DOYLE

Staff Correspondent.

EN ROUTE WITH WORLD SERIES SPECIAL FROM NEW YORK TO ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—It used to be Eddie Collins, then Frankie Frisch and now it's Columbia Lou. Eddie, also a Columbia boy, leaped to the rank of star as soon as he had a chance to do his stuff in a world series. That was more than 15 years ago, when Eddie was a Mackian marvel.

About 10 years later the Giants started a record run of world series play. Meantime a kid came via the subway route to join the Giants and to displace Larry Doyle. That was our hero, the Fordham flash, and what Frankie did to the Yankees of that era is always remembered when Giant fans congregate.

One year ago Columbia Lou stole the show in a world series that brought out a lot of feature acts from out the Giant ranks. Gehrig was a sensation in the two games at Forbes Field and the other two in the Yankee Stadium that wound things up.

Gehrig practically won yesterday's game with his dramatic blow of the first inning. And, believe it, folks, that clout of Gehrig's might have gone over the sheet-iron exit gates of Forbes Field. The ball is said to have carried more than 400 feet. In any event, it shook the whole Redbird outfit, although it did not touch one of them.

Gehrig started the Yanks on their way to victory in the opener with a strong-arm double. His fielding seems to be a combination of Lefty Grimm and Hal Chase, if you'll pardon the enthusiasm. He slipped just a bit yesterday in missing a funny flip from Tony Lazzeri, but the ball may have come to him with reverse English, as Tony isn't throwing correctly these days. The second-sacker was charged with the error.

Neither Douthit nor Hafey has come through with a hit. The Redbird centerfielder apparently has been weak at the plate for many weeks. Hafey has socked three balls that were close to the home-run zone, but they were gathered in.

SWETONIC VICTOR AGAIN

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 6.—(INS.)—Steve Swetonic, former Pittsburgh sandlotter, won his third game in the little world series yesterday, Indianapolis beating Rochester 6 to 4.

Swetonic allowed seven hits and passed two.

Reb Russell drove in three runs in the first with a homer over the right field fence and again in the fifth he hit another four-base drive to the same spot, scoring two more runs. Russell singled and walked in two other times up.

Rochester was crippled again by the absence of Manager Southworth in the outfield. His leg prevents him from playing again in the series.

It was Indianapolis' fourth victory and the Indians need but one more, Rochester needs four wins.

Harry Keck, sports editor of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, was a speaker. The local agency is involved in a sales drive against the Chicago agency and the main bout was featured by a knockout victory for the boxer representing Pittsburgh over his Chicago opponent.

The Big Doings After the Ball Game Is Over -:- -:- By TAD

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

THE Yankees now have won six straight world series games, four from the Pirates last year and two from the Cardinals so far in the current series. Unless something different happens pretty soon, how about calling off these interleague alleged "contests" on the ground that somebody or something is being shown up?

Bill McKechnie, manager of the Cardinals, is not yet beaten, but he is in his usual tight spot. He generally manages to go through all of the agonies possible in a situation before he pulls through, and this world series is no exception. He got off behind in the series with the Senators when he was handling the Pirates in 1925, but finally won out. This year he had tough sledding to cop the pennant and spent many sleepless nights before he finally got under the wire, and now he is taking his Cardinals back home two down to the Yankees in the series. His old ace, Pete Alexander, has been knocked for a flock of loops and Willie Sherdel got his bumps in the opener. It's a victory for Jess Haines or bust in the first of the battles at St. Louis tomorrow.

THERE is just one ray of hope for our Will and that lies in the fact that in the two games they have lost his boys haven't been hitting and are about due. Three hits off Hoyt in the first game and four off Pipgras in the second—seven in all—is not a normal batting gait for a flock of .300 belting beauties.

The Yanks got sweet revenge against Alex yesterday for the fine breaks he didn't give them two years ago. It is questionable if the scales have been balanced, so don't waste your tears over the Old Man yet. He may come back later in the series—that is, if the darn thing lasts beyond Monday, and this picker of the Cardinals is getting that wavering feeling and it won't take much more to make him toss in the sponge.

Now, if the Yankees only weren't so badly crippled maybe the Cards would have a chance. You know, no one wants to pick on cripples, and that probably explains why the St. Louisans have been so mild-mannered so far in the series.

LUKE CARNEY, local manager and second of boxers, called the turn on Young Jack Thompson's defeat by clever Jackie Fields on the Coast the other night, after Thompson had knocked out Joe Dundee, the welterweight champion, in two rounds. Luke saw Fields win by a technical knockout over Jack Zivic during the latter's recent trip to California, the bout being stopped because of the reopening of a cut over Zivic's right eye.

Now Luke predicts that Fields will knock out Sergt. Sammy Baker, who is to go out to the Coast to take him, after having beaten Young Corbett in their return bout for the right to box the winner of the forthcoming repeat battle between Dundee and Thompson. Luke says Fields is a very fast and smart boxer and a corking good puncher.

"He is too fast and thinks too rapidly for Baker," Carney adds, and he should know, for he has seen Fields box and has seconded Baker in a number of the latter's bouts.

Carney thinks Baker is slipping. Sammy is a very methodical fighter. Luke summed up his title chances in a few choice words, to wit:

"The trouble with Baker is that he slowed down too fast."

Wonder if he stripped any gears making the quick stop?

A RATHER unusual and interesting boxing card has been arranged for the Jolly Bowl, New Castle, next Monday night. It consists of a middleweight windup between Young Firpo and Floyd Hybert, and four heavyweight preliminaries, two of them six-rounders and the two others four-rounders. Two sets of brothers will clash, Dick Gibbons, of Duquesne, boxing Frank Simms, of Cleveland, in the semi-final, and Ed Gibbons, brother of Dick, meeting Eddie Simms, brother of Frank, in a four-round event.

SOCCER NEWS by TOM BIRKS

TODAY'S GAMES
DISTRICT LEAGUE
Pittsburgh Rovers at Celtics.
Douglas A. C. at Twin Boros.
CENTRAL LEAGUE
Swissvale at Central A. C.
Springdale at Leechburg.

FOUR games are carded today for local soccerites. Two games are scheduled in each of the Saturday leagues, the Central and the District. The leading battle will naturally be the Celtics-Rovers contest at Lawrence Park.

Douglas, which created a sensation last Saturday by defeating the Celtics, will travel to Twin Boros. The Douglas eleven will probably take that game.

In the Central loop, Swissvale meets Central A. C. at Westinghouse High School Stadium. Central is getting better each game and should fully test the playing ability of the Switch boys.

Springdale will travel to Leechburg to meet the Steel boys. That should be a local derby.

DIEGEL MEETS ESPINOSA

BALTIMORE, Oct. 6.—Leo Diegel and Al Espinosa meet at 36 holes today in the final round of the annual Professional Golfers' Association tournament.

Diegel advanced to the final yesterday by eliminating Gene Sarazen by the overwhelming margin of 9 and 8. Espinosa, who won the qualifying medal and who has played close to par throughout the tournament, defeated Horton Smith, 6 and 5, in the other semi-final battle.

JOE GLICK TAKES WIN OVER TOMMY GROGAN

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Joe Glick, Brooklyn, drubbed Tommy Grogan, Omaha, Neb., in the feature 10-round match in Madison Square Garden last night. A left hook floored Grogan for a count of four in the sixth round. Glick weighed 134½, Grogan 135.

The match drew more than 16000 fans to the Garden arena and drew a total gate of $41,618, under the new scale of "popular" prices inaugurated by Tex Rickard when his high-priced extravaganzas of the summer failed to pay expenses.

Baby Joe Gans, California Negro, knocked out Andy DiVodi, local favorite, in the ninth round of the semi-final.

PITCAIRN, PHILADELPHIA R. R. NINES CLASH TODAY

With the title at stake, the third and deciding game of the Pennsylvania Railroad championship will be played at Pitcairn this afternoon between the Pitcairn Shops team, and the Philadelphia Terminal nine. The locals won the first game at Altoona by a 10-to-4 score, and the Philly boys evened up the series by winning at Philadelphia, 16-to-2. Pitcairn is depending upon Sifty, the spitball ace, to bring the title into camp.

LONG'S SPORT COMMENT

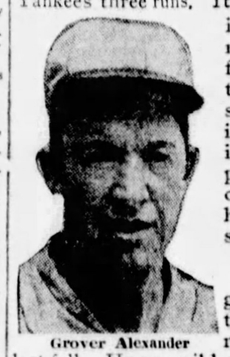
Yankees three runs. It was easily the longest drive of the series, going into the open seats in deep right center at a point about 450 feet from the plate. Many spectators thought that Gehrig instead of Lazzeri should have been charged with the error in the play on Alexander in the second inning, but notwithstanding this Lou is playing a remarkable game at the first corner and hitting in a style that makes him one of the outstanding men in the series.



Grover Alexander

The exhibition given by George Pipgras on the mound for the Yanks yesterday after he settled down was a sad reminder of what he did to the Pirates last fall. He was wild and unsteady at the start, but recovered his grip after Frankie Frisch had led off with a single in the third inning, and from that time to the finish the Missourians got only one hit. Of the last 24 men to face the Dane, only three reached first base. Pipgras, by the way, is not such a youngster as has been generally believed. He has passed the 29-year mark.

Frankie Frisch is beginning to show the form he was wont to display as a Giant in previous world series. He made half of his club's hits yesterday, stole a base and in general conducted himself like the great money player he has always been.

THE scene of the world series, which has resulted disastrously for the National League champions in the two games played so far, has shifted to St. Louis, and the last hope of the twice-beaten Cardinals hinges on the change.

On their own grounds, the Redbirds may be able to pull themselves together, as Manager Bill McKechnie confidently predicted after the arrival of the contending clubs, and, if they do not go so far as to pull the series out of the fire they may at least place to their credit a better showing than their poor performances in New York indicated would be possible.

The Sunday game means everything to the Redbirds. If they can capture that contest the odds will not be so heavily against them as they are at present, and besides, a victory may give them a lease of life, fill them with new fighting spirit and perhaps throw them back into their batting stride. On the other hand, if the Yankees win again on Sunday and thus make it three in a row, it will be a matter of only a brief space of time until the knockout punch is sent over and the Cards go down for the count.

JESS HAINES will have the task of saving his club from being routed, and in the opinion of many National League men the job could be placed in better hands.

Haines has had only a fair year, all told, but there are times when he is one of the toughest pitchers in the country to beat, and Sunday may be one of the occasions. His knuckle ball and terrific speed are apt to baffle the Yankees where the stuff of Sherdel and Alexander failed.

"WHAT'S the matter with Hafey?" has been one of the puzzling problems of the series. The Cardinal left-fielder, one of the most dangerous hitters in the National League, has ben practically helpless at bat and besides has performed very poorly in the field. It will make a huge difference in the Cardinal attack if Hafey and his outfield mates find their batting eyes in the first game here. Up to date only one hit has been made by the entire St. Louis outfield.

YOU may look out for at least one trade by the Pittsburgh club this winter. A member of the team whom the management decided sometime ago to retain has again got into the bad graces of the Pirate bosses, it is reported, and will be used in a deal before another season rolls around.

Rumors of big deals and managerial changes in the major leagues for next year continue to fill the air while the world series is in progress. The most persistent report, and one that will not down, is that to the effect that Rogers Hornsby, though supposed to have signed a five-year contract as manager of the Braves at a salary of $40,000 to $45,000, is to be sent to the Cubs for a huge sum of money and some playing material on the side.

HORNSBY himself, who is attending the series, merely smiles when the rumor is brought to his attention, saying that he knows nothing about it and that he will play ball wherever the money is.

From a source close to the Cub management, however, it is learned that negotiations have actually been opened between the Chicago and Boston clubs for the transfer of the services of the star hitter. Whether they will be consummated or not is a question, but it is said that the chances favor their going through. The Boston club is reported to have lost something like $100,000 this year and is unable longer to bear the financial burden of paying such a salary to a manager as Hornsby receives.

George Pipgras.

STUFFY M'INNIS, former first baseman of the Pirates and other clubs and one of the unfortunates who have tried to manage the Phillies, bobbed up at the world series with another hard luck story.

McInnis managed the Salem Club in the New England League this year and did the job so well that his team was beaten out for the pennant by only half a game. When the season closed, however, it was discovered that the owner of the club had gone broke and was unable to pay salaries. Stuffy says that neither he nor any of the players in the club received any pay for the last six weeks of the playing period.

M'INNIS' plans for next year are unshaped. He says he is thinking of giving up the game, but admits that his liking for baseball is so strong that the first breath of spring may cause him to alter his intentions.

McInnis, incidentally, is a strong booster for Earl Sheely, the former White Sox first baseman drafted by the Pirates from Sacramento for next year.

"Pittsburgh has landed the best first baseman in baseball," declared Stuffy, who knows a thing or two himself about playing the initial bag. "I do not hesitate to say that Sheely is without an equal in the country today as a fielding first-sacker. He is particularly good at stretching a mile and spearing wide throws with his gloved hand without taking his foot off the bag. There is nothing that he can't do in the fielding line. He is a corking hitter, too, and a valuable man to any club, though he has slowed up somewhat since one of his ankles was broken a couple of years ago. He is the greatest fielding first baseman since Hal Chase."

CONNIE MACK, manager of the Athletics, admitted that he intended to draft Sheely for his own club, but Pittsburgh ranked ahead of the A's on the privilege list and Sheely was landed by the Pirates before Connie got a chance.

Hearst Rifle Shoot Plans Advanced

ACTING under instructions of Maj. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff of the United States Army, the War Department today is making preparations for the supervision of the ninttth annual rifle matches for the William Randolph Hearst Trophies among reserve officer training corps units in educational institutions throughout the country.

Trophies, medals and other rewards are to be presented, and more than 400 teams from colleges, high schools and military academies in the United States and possessions will enter teams in the national championships.

After announcing that he had sent instructions to commanding generals to give their full co-operation to the matches, Maj. Gen. Summerall made the following statement:

"The national Hearst rifle trophy competition among units of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps furnishes a valuable incentive to all rifle practice. The War Department is glad to lend its co-operation for the success of this competition, not only on account of the military benefits, but also because rifle practice is of value to the individual as a development of physical co-ordination."

Maj. Gen. Paul Malone, commanding the Sixth Corps area at Chicago, has been instructed to designate an official referee for the shoot. Targets, rules and other information are to be sent out in the near future.

THREE CLASSES

As in past years, there will be three classifications for the competition—the senior R. O. T. C. units, comprising universities and colleges; the junior units, composed of high school cadets, and the third division, made up of military academies.

Perpetual trophies will be awarded to the national champions, together with shields and cups for sectional winners. Gold wrist watches are to be awarded individual champions in each section, and gold or silver medals are to go to members of all teams winning places among the leaders. Because of the great increase in competing schools, many additions have been made in the awards.

The Hearst trophies are the most coveted of all prizes competed for by cadets in American schools. Owing to the number of teams entered—which exceeds the total of any other institutional competition—the winners are recognized as champions in their various classifications.

CHISOX BEAT CUBS, 13-11

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—A deluge of base hits, misplays and pitchers swept across Wrigley Field yesterday and from the chaos that went under the name of a baseball game the White Sox emerged victorious over the Cubs, 13 to 11, in the third game of their series for the city baseball title.

Twenty thousand fans, sitting through an hour and one-half of weird baseball, saw practically every play known in the game. There were base hits of every description, sensational double plays, brilliant catches, errors of the crudest type, stolen bases, including a theft of home; wild pitches, passed balls and numerous bases on balls and a few other plays not noted in the scoring column.

PETE LATZO VICTOR

DETROIT, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Pete Latzo, Scranton, Pa., light heavyweight, won the decision over Charley Belanger, of Vancouver, B. C., in a gruelling 10-round boxing contest here last night. Belanger set the pace in the early rounds, but slowed down to a walk in the later sessions.

ACTIVE TRADING SHORT MARKET SESSION HERE

CARNEGIE METALS FIRM, ARKANSAS HOLDS STEADY

Trading was active and prices were firm during the short week-end session on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today.

Most of the early dealings were in Arkansas Gas and Carnegie Metals, with a few scattered trades in the miscellaneous manufacturing division and figures showing small fractional advances over the previous closings.

Arkansas found a fairly evenly balanced market around 3½ during the early trading with several hundred shares changing hands at that figure. While the supply of stock at that level was not conspicuously large, it was also evident that the buying demand had cooled down some. Heaviest trading in the issue occurred the middle of the week, when the price was run up from 2⅝ to 3⅞ on a turnover of about 50,000 shares in two sessions.

Carnegie Metals ran into some buying orders at the start of business today and in a short time had advanced to 21, as against sales at 19¾ on Thursday. Speculative interest in the stock has been on the increase for the past two weeks, following the latest advance in the price of copper and the strengthening of the metal and mining groups in other markets.

Plymouth Oil and the new Reymer shares were active in the outside market at advancing prices. Plymouth declared a dividend of 50 cents, comparing with the payment in August of 25 cents, accounting for the steady demand for the stock the past few days. Reymer was wanted around 30. The stock will be issued shortly and is expected will have a favorable public reception.

ROUND TABLE of BUSINESS

Railroads' Car Buying Fails to Develop Enough to Increase Airbrake Profits as Anticipated.

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE hoped-for revival in the buying of railroad equipment did not develop to an extent sufficiently great to increase the earnings of the Westinghouse Air Brake Company in the third quarter. In the first quarter of this year Air Brake earned 45 cents a share. In the second quarter 48 cents a share was earned.

The statement for the three months ended September 30 is not expected to show any material improvement. The stock pays dividends of 50 cents quarterly so that dividends this year have slightly exceeded earnings.

IN A company with the financial strength of Westinghouse Air Brake this does not offer cause for much apprehension. At the end of 1927 the current assets were over eight times the current liabilities. Cash amounted to $8,330,736, which was greater than all current liabilities of $5,159,117.

United States Government and other securities totaled $11,352,249. Cash and negotiable securities constituted 47 per cent of current assets and the current assets were 57 per cent of the total assets.

THE old stock was split on a four-for-one basis in the latter part of 1927. It had been on a $7 annual dividend basis. The $8 rate for the new stock appeared conservative since earnings last year exceeded the annual dividend requirements at the present rate by $4 per cent.

Air Brake's plant facilities are adequate so that, with its exceptional financial position, the company can afford to pay all of its earnings to stockholders.

THE buying of cars by railroads is not reflected in the company's earnings for three or four months. Railroads have shown little interest in equipment buying recently so that small earnings will continue during the final quarter of this year.

WESTINGHOUSE Air Brake's net income for the entire year of 1928 will be much smaller than last year when $8,520,009 was reported. This was equivalent to $2.68 a share on the stock.

The company has no preferred stock and no funded debt.

THE recent sale of two subsidiaries, the Locomotive Stoker Company and the Westinghouse Union Battery Company, will not greatly affect the earnings of the parent company, since their volume was only a small part of the total business.

But the effect, if any, will be beneficial since both these organizations had been showing losses. Westinghouse Air Brake still retains an interest in the battery company.

THE company showed good earnings in 1926 and 1927 in spite of the fact that neither of those years was remarkably good from the standpoint of railroad car buying.

The sale of replacement parts tended to maintain the air brake volume, but a great part of the profit was secured from the Union Switch & Signal Company, the largest subsidiary.

The sales of signals and automatic train control equipment were large. At present the signal business is only moderately good.

STOCK MARKET ADVANCES ON BROAD SCALE

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP.)—Speculation for the advance was resumed on a broad scale in today's brief session of the market under the leadership of the independent motor shares. Powerful pools took enormous blocks of stocks at rising prices, early gains ranging from 1 to nearly 8 points. There were several soft spots, due to heavy week-end profit-taking.

Outside the stock market, chief interest centered in the announcement that the Radio Corporation had purchased an interest in Keith-Albee Orpheum, Inc. The United Biscuit Company, Safeway Stores and the Fairchild Aviation Company announced recapitalization plans. Bullish sentiment was created by the optimistic tenor of the weekly mercantile reviews.

Chrysler was again the market leader, moving up to a new high record at 140½ after having dipped to 136⅝ in an early outbreak of selling. Studebaker and Hupp attained new peak prices at 85⅝ and 79¼, respectively. Hudson ran up 4⅝ points and Motor Products jumped 7⅝.

Rails were quiet and sluggish, St. Louis Southwestern falling back 2 points.

The closing was strong. Total stock sales approximated 2,000,000 shares.

PROSECUTION HELD PRICE OF GLORY BARN'S RADIO

If Evangelist John W. Sproul broadcasts his sermons from the Glory Barn, West Carson street, over his own private radio station without a license, he will face criminal prosecution by the Federal Radio Commission, it was learned here last night.

A heavy fine and imprisonment are provided. The commission, which recently refused Sproul a license, had learned of his declared intention to defy its ban should a license request, now pending, be refused.

Members of the commission in Washington said yesterday that Sproul had the privilege of filing an appeal with the Commission itself. If that were lost, they said, he could go to the Court of Appeals at Washington. Sproul did not state last night whether he still intended to go on the air from his own station without a license.

About half a hundred persons went forward last night to the platform in Glory Barn and made known their intentions of accepting Christianity.

A dozen others went to the platform to be healed. All of the latter group professed that they had been benefited.

About 1,500 persons attended the services.

Mr. Sproul spoke on "The Brazen Serpent."

He said in part:

"Every stricken Israelite who looked in faith at the serpent of brass was made whole again. This Old Testament story of physical healing was used by Jesus to illustrate what He had come to do for all who trust Him for salvation from sin and sickness.

"Of all the millions who have accepted Him as their Savior from the penalty of sin, only a few have seen that physical healing is also included in the atonement Jesus provided by His death.

"They pray for healing, but add, 'If it be Thy will,' although the Bible distinctly declares that it is God's will. James, the Lord's brother, taught us to say 'If it be Thy will—we will carry out our plans for worldly business'—but when he speaks of healing he emphatically asserts—'The prayer of faith shall save the sick.'"

LABOR COUNCIL STAYS NEUTRAL

The Pittsburgh Central Labor Council is maintaining a strict neutrality so far as indorsements of presidential candidate is concerned. This was announced yesterday by its secretary, P. J. McGrath, who made public a copy of a resolution to that effect adopted by the Central Union.

The resolution declared that the Central Union's attention had been called to a purported indorsement of Herbert Hoover by the labor movement and branded such an indorsement as not representing organized labor.

Protest on "Bus Fare" Is Matter for Council

The North Side Chamber of Commerce has adopted a resolution asking the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company to reduce its excessive passenger fare of 25 cents.

This charge is made for a service that is duplicated in other cities for two-fifths, or 40 per cent, of what is charged here. In other cities carriers find a dime is enough to give them a fair profit after paying all expenses, which in some places includes a large payment to the city for the use of the streets.

In Pittsburgh we pay more and the city not only gets nothing for the use of the streets, but it appears that it has nothing to say as to whether they may be used or not.

Of course, it is conceded that the city gets from the State its share of the receipts through the issuance of automobile licenses, but the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company pays no more proportionately than any other automobile owner. To the city directly it pays nothing.

To force a reduced rate, according to Charles M. Lang, special assistant city solicitor, Council would have to take the initiative. Mr. Lang says the burden of the proof of the injustice of the rate would be on the city in any complaint to the Public Service Commission.

If the Pittsburgh Railways Company wishes to operate street cars in any street it must receive permission of Council. If it wishes to operate busses it seems Council has nothing to say and must shoulder "the burden of proof" in case it objects to the rates charged.

If the Pittsburgh Railways Company wishes to operate street cars it has to assume the obligation of keeping that part of the street occupied by its tracks in a good state of repair. Its motor coaches wear out our pavements without so much as a "thank you."

The Allied Boards of Trade is looking into all traffic problems including the 25-cent bus rate. The North Side Chamber of Commerce asks for a reduction. Mr. Lang says the city must act and furnish the proof.

The public thinks it is being imposed upon by the Pittsburgh Railways Company, which controls the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company. That is indicated in the actions of the Allied Boards of Trade and the North Side Chamber of Commerce and the letters of protest against the unfair rate that have come to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

If the proper agency to take up the matter of having bus fares reduced to a fair and reasonable charge be Council, it certainly is up to Council to act. It is up to Council to act before the Pittsburgh Street Railways Company fills up our streets with busses on which it can charge a fare that Council would not permit on a street car.

Efficient Plan Urged For City Disbursements

The recommendation of the adoption of a centralized control of the city's receipts and disbursements appears to be worthy of approval by Council. It is urged by a committee including Councilmen Garland, McArdle, Alderdice and English, who recently visited Baltimore to study the plan they now recommend.

The effect of the proposal would be to centralize in the office of the city controller all disbursements, instead of having them made through several offices, including that of the city controller, as at present.

That looks like good business. The administration of the fiscal affairs of a city the size of Pittsburgh is "big business" and the city serves the taxpayers best when it provides for the efficiency of modern business methods.

Suppressed by Mexico

And No Wonder.

MEXICAN OFFICERS AT MESS BEFORE THE ALTAR, OFFENDING MILLIONS OF MEXICANS.

The London Graphic prints this picture, saying it had been "suppressed by the Mexican Government," NO WONDER. Ninety per cent of all Mexicans are Catholics and 90 per cent of them believe this picture represents sacrilege.

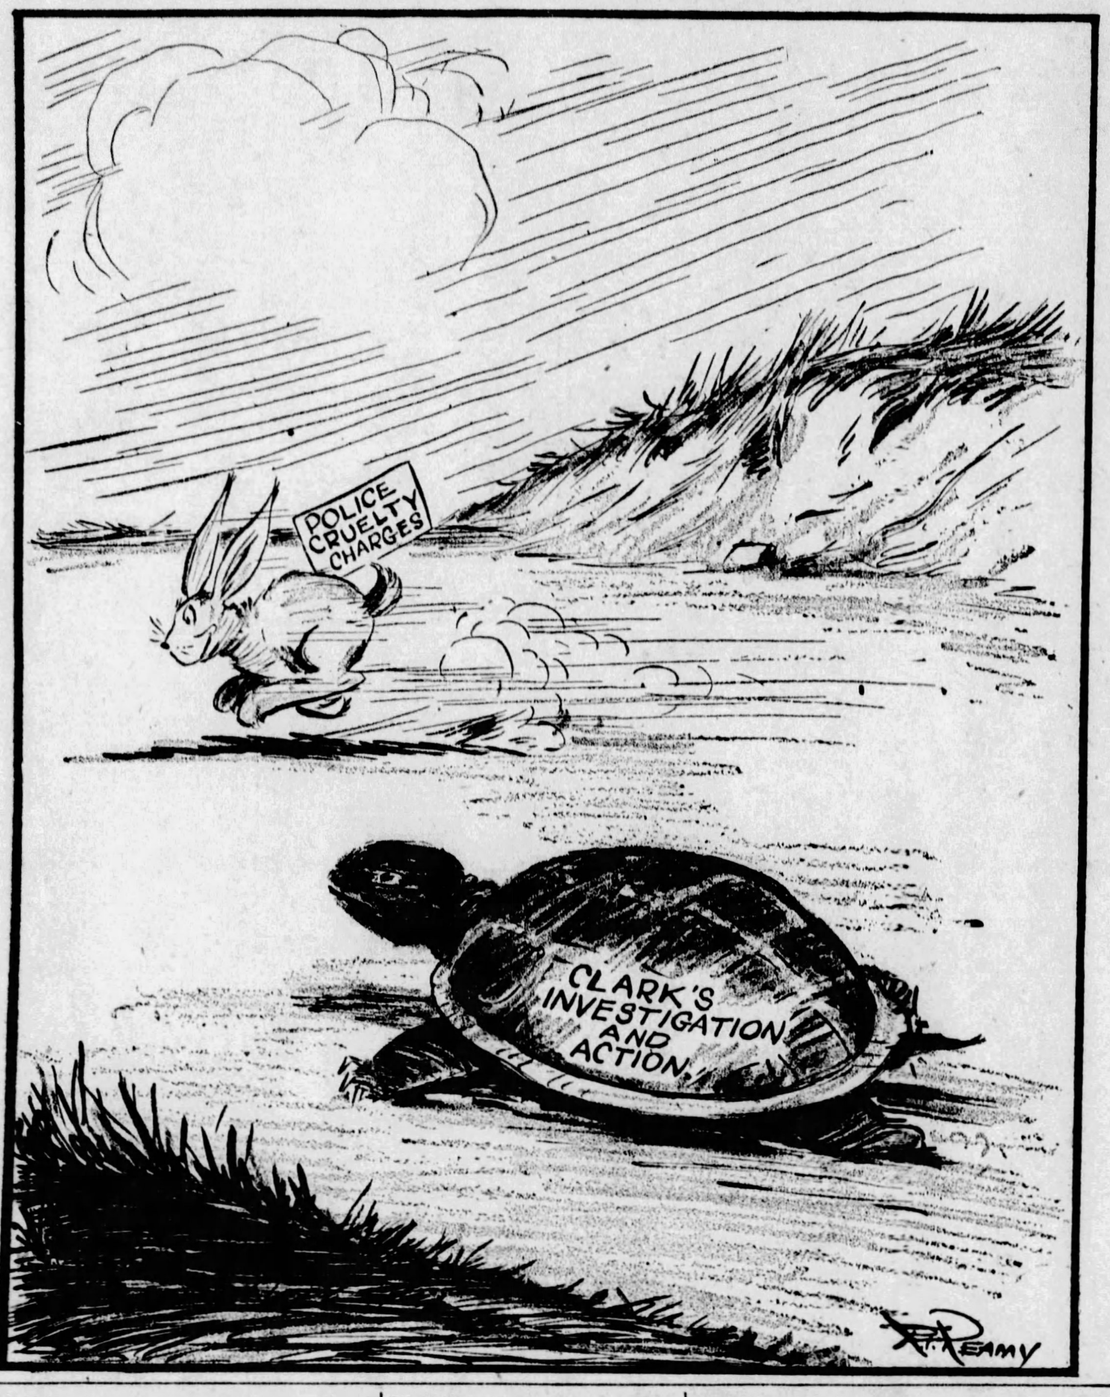
Church property in Mexico has been taken over by the Government, but it is easily understood how The Faithful of the Mexican Church would resent such use of a church property, and particularly the erecting of a "mess table" immediately in front of the altar.

This picture, more than many words, explains some of Mexico's troubles.

It is not new in history, however. Those who have seen the marvelous picture of "The Last Supper," painted by Leonardo da Vinci, in an Italian church, have noticed the mutilations, hoof marks, in the lower part of the picture, which barely escaped complete destruction.

During Napoleon's invasion of Italy the church with the painting of "The Last Supper" was used as a stable. The horses were fed, their heels toward a picture worth more than a thousand Napoleons.

SLOW—LET IT BE SURE!



Garrett P. Serviss Says:

"Marginal Men"

SOCIOLOGISTS of the University of Chicago, led by Prof. Robert Park, are striking out a new line in the study of human civilization. They think that they have discerned a type of man which is specially representative of the process of changing civilization, and those belonging to this type are called "marginal men." The explanation is that the minds of such men constitute the meeting point in which "conflicting cultures meet and fuse."

Because they are capable of grasping, and judging the relative values of two different cultures at the same time, it is out of their cogitations that the form of advancing civilization issues.

From this we may see that it is not those who keep in the forefront of change that determine what the new culture shall be, for they represent only one of the elements out of which it must be developed. The man with the "marginal" mind, fusing the old into the new, is the real reviser of civilization. He breaks the hard shell of pure conservatism and blends whatever it contains of continuing value with the fresh matter offered by the out-and-out revolution. The changing conditions of life bring forth three types—the conservative, radical and the "marginal man" who is the real adjuster of the new to the old. Therefore it is in the study of minds of the last-named type that the real grounds on which a new culture is to rest may best be discovered.

It is reported that two graduate students of the university are seeking for examples of the "marginal man" whose mentality they would subject to analysis in order to discern therein the true lineaments of the coming time.

The outward aspect of civilization has never altered more rapidly than it has been doing within the past decade, and it is yet too early to determine into what definite shape it will settle. The "marginal man," whether or not conscious of his function, can hardly yet have a good grasp upon the problem of adjustment presented in such a swirl of incoherent elements as the social world offers at present.

The man who feels in a dazed sort of way that he has "lived beyond the edge of his time," or has been "pushed over the verge of a precipice," could hardly be counted as "marginal" in the sense described; at least not before he recovers his mental equilibrium and becomes able to select coolly what is valuable in the new ways of thinking and acting. The definition of the marginal man implies a substantial conservation for he builds on the foundation of things as they were before the new views became active. He "frees himself from the old ways in order to make a better adjustment to life."

Such men can hardly be looked for among the young, whose general tendency is to follow and develop whatever has the glamour of novelty. Neither should they be sought among the old, who naturally prefer what they have known familiarly all their lives. They should be found, then, generally among those in the middle terms of life, whose mentality is still adjustable, while they have practical knowledge extending in both directions.

The marginal man must be the product of a wide education. His numbers are multiplying in consequence, and becoming a bulwark against violent and excessive social changes.

German Progress

LUFTHANSA, the great German air service, has arranged a hookup with the German state railways so that Germans can make air-and-rail shipments in all directions on through bills of lading. That is, the air express service is now made available to the most inaccessible hamlets.

To make the service more popular, they are projecting night flights, since most merchants receive their orders during the day and make their shipments in the afternoon.

Already there is a daily night service from Berlin to Moscow. They are going to institute nightly express planes leaving Berlin at midnight and arriving at London and Paris at eight the next morning. Train service from west, central and south Germany will make connections with these express planes so that the entire country will have an overnight express service to London and Paris.

That is intelligent stimulation of export trade.

Discredit All Scandal

SAID one woman to another: "I am glad that I have lived long enough in your town to know that the tales told of you by your next door neighbor are not true."

Pretty broad and uncompromising statement, wasn't it?

The newcomer had been told lies about some of those whom she would be likely to meet, and to what purpose?

In the first place beware of the woman who speaks ill of anyone in her home town or neighborhood when conversing with a visitor or a recent resident.

It is not a kindness, nor is it intended as such.

People who are old enough to move from one place to another and establish a home ought to be able to protect themselves from undesirable persons without the aid of certain old residents.

Remember that when the mean tale or scandalous story is heard.

Also remember that the one who brings you scandal is looking for something to take away, and be on your guard.

If people would go around among newcomers saying truthfully that so-and-so is a good person to know and tell why, it might help some.

If you can become acquainted with the right sort, the others don't count, but the scandalmonger thinks to strengthen himself or herself by mean tales, while the reverse is true in the end.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

I Will Be True

I WILL be true, however great the price
Which life exacts from this most cherished boon;
No lure can from truth's paths my steps entice,
To truth I turn, as tides unto the moon.

I serve truth ever, asking no reward,
With love enduring, zeal that never flags,
Although her terms to many may seem hard,
Her fare may be a crust, her livery rags.

In every time and every circumstance
Truth only will my constant longing woo,
And even in those dark hours when cruel chance
Makes all men think me false, I will be true!

Isn't It So?

Without thrift it is not possible for anyone to thrive.

Great Passages from the Bible

"Unto Thee Will I Cry"

(Psalm 28)

UNTO thee will I cry, O Lord my rock; be not silent to me: lest, if thou be silent to me, I become like them that go down into the pit.

Hear the voice of my supplications, when I cry unto thee, when I lift up my hand toward thy holy oracle.

Draw me not away with the wicked, and with the workers of iniquity, which speak peace to their neighbours, but mischief is in their hearts.

Give them according to their deeds, and according to the wickedness of their endeavours: give them after the work of their hands; render to them their desert.

Because they regard not the works of the Lord, nor the operation of his hands, he shall destroy them, and not build them up.

Blessed be the Lord, because he hath heard the voice of my supplications.

The Lord is my strength and my shield; my heart trusted in him, and I am helped: therefore my heart greatly rejoiceth; and with my song will I praise him.

The Lord is their strength, and he is the saving strength of his anointed.

Save thy people, and bless thine inheritance: feed them also, and lift them up for ever.

Tales that are Told

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

I DON'T know when girls begin to learn how to talk catty after each other. Of course, it's not any girls you know. I am talking about some other girls, in London, maybe it is.

Anyway, one of these girls way off somewhere, met her girl friend at lunch, and she says to her, "Say, who was that awful sappy looking guy you was with last night? I could see you was bored to tears with him, and I was just sorry for you. He looked like such a wash-out."

"Why, that was my brother," says the girl friend.

"Oh, I'm so sorry I said he was sappy looking. I ought to have known he was some relation to you, because, I remember now there was such a striking resemblance."

The Roundabout Route

EVERYTHING depends on the evidence of one witness.

"Now," said the barrister, "we want to hear just what you know—not what you think, not what you've heard, or what someone else knows. Do you understand?"

By a happy smile the witness showed that he understood.

"Well, sir," he began, "it was like this. Old Bill Grubbs said to me that Thomas John's wife—at any rate, so 'e 'eard from Tom Payne—told Syd Lewis' best girl that 'er husband—"

The witness got no further. For a minute it seemed that nothing could save the judge from an apoplectic fit. Happily he just managed to control himself. The witness was ordered to stand down, and the case proceeded.

All the Difference

JOHN SNOBB, a cobbler in a little village, was quite up to date in his business methods. Over the door of his establishment appeared one of the new daylight signs with the words, "The Boot Hospital."

One day a customer brought a pair of boots to be repaired.

"I don't think they're worth it," declared the cobbler frankly.

"But look here," protested the other. "I want 'em mended, and this is supposed to be a hospital, isn't it?"

"Oh, yes," agreed the man behind the counter, "that's right enough, but it's not a mortuary at the same time."

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Few are conscious of the remarkable strides the Negro has made in the theater in the past few years. Ten years ago their histrionic ability was confined to a few dingy and abandoned burlesque theaters above One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street in Harlem.

About six years ago they landed down town as far as Sixty-second street, where Miller and Lyle wrote, produced and appeared in "Shuffle Along"—the first of the sepia shows to attract a white audience. It became a rage and made the two colored sponsors a neat sum.

Wistful Florence Mills with her flashing jet black eyes then appeared in a cabaret revue over the Winter Garden, and Broadway society packed the place. Her subsequent stardom in an all-colored show on Broadway and later triumphs in London and Paris are now theatrical history.

Two brown skin shows had long runs on Forty-second street this season, appearing cheek by jowl with the best theatrical offerings. One was the dramatic and poignant "Porgy," which came back for a return engagement, and the other was Lew Leslie's "Blackbirds of 1928."

The latter brought out Aida Ward, called the successor to Florence Mills, and Adelaide Hall, another dusky singing sensation. Also Bill Robinson, an ebony tap dancer whose nimble feet lifted him out of cheap vaudeville to a star commanding $1,400 a week. To see him tap dance up a pair of stairs is a grand treat.

Paul Robeson is another distinguished actor coming out of what is known as the Smoke Era. There are a dozen cabaret revues in Harlem bringing nightly white audiences from downtown. What is impressive is the enthusiasm of the colored performer for the job.

Most Negro chorus girls are really octoroons and could pass for white in white shows. Some comedians are so light they wear burnt cork. There are also chorus girls with blonde and red hair, and all hair is straight.

The successor to the "Black Bottom" dance is christened "The Low Down" and is a sensuous shiver executed chiefly with a flutter of the hips. A dancing master describes it as a "tremble and a jerk." It combines the suggestive features of both the Charleston and the Black Bottom and is pretty terrible.

It is also noticed melancholy "blues" songs have almost completely lost their wallop. Several "blues" singers received fabulous salaries and were featured in every revue. Today scores of them are "at liberty."

The vogue among singing entertainers now are those who talk their songs and give it a melodramatic punch at the finish. One needs to be more of an elocutionist than a warbler.

Big movie houses have developed many unknowns in the past few months. They give them the background of elaborate stage settings and excellent orchestras, and as a result even mediocre acts go across with a bang. Some have been eagerly grabbed for more intimate types of performance, sans scenery and orchestras, and were dismal flops.

California leads in furnishing New York with unique singing, dancing and orchestra leader entertainers. Most of them come out of west coast cabarets and manage to add a wholesome zip that tickles the jaded New Yorker.

Yet somehow talking orchestra leaders are giving many of us a permanent wave in the neck. Their humor is as skimpy as a Freuh caricature. "Wit" as Whistler, or somebody just as bright, said, "is never an attempt to be funny."

What Americanizing the World Means

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

Years ago the French were using a phrase, "Le monde quis' Americanise," which being roughly translated means "Americanizing the world."

There is no doubt that America exerts the greatest influence of any nation in the world. Other nations may not like her, they may scorn Americans and despise our sordid dollar worship. But all the same they are subtly affected.

What does Americanizing the world mean? Is it a cheap, shabby and coarsening influence? Is it a slump from European culture to barbarism?

Hardly.

Americans are found in the lead in scientific investigation, exploration, literature and the arts.

The real truth is that America stands for the business man. He is the ideal and the leader in America. Among us it is no church man, or soldier, or artist that occupies the center of the stage.

At various times and at various places in the world's history the soldier class or the priest class has been dominant.

Formerly to be in trade was to be looked down upon. Commerce as well as banking was supposed to be a somewat ignoble business.

In America, for the first time, the banker, the oil or steel merchant, or the automobile manufacturer, or the engineer sits in the seats of the mighty.

We have even nominated a mere engineer for President.

This importance of the business man has brought with it three things: science as applied to human welfare (formerly it was pure speculation), improvement of transportation, and mass production.

Somehow these things have done more to improve the condition of the common man than all of the fine spun theories of Karl Marx and others.

Only under a business regime is a democracy possible. They are having hard sledding with democracy in Italy, Spain and other European countries, and democracy languishes in Latin-American countries because they lack a huge business middle class. There are a few mighty aristocrats and a multitude of hangers-on.

In America it is the business middle class that predominates.

Therefore, when you say that the world is Americanizing you mean that the middle class is growing in importance and that the world is no more to be composed of a few mighty leaders and a multitutde of slaves.

OH, THESE WOMEN

By LEOLA ALLARD.

HERE are some bits of conversation heard on the street, at cafes, in elevators, at store counters, and other places, between women!

"I didn't get home till 1 o'clock, and I didn't even have enough money to tip the taxi driver!"

"Well, can you beat that! What did Mable get out of it?"

"Try this hat on, dear. It's squashy and should become your thin face. It will soften it."

"Why don't you get one? You need it more than I do."

Silence.

"I've never seen such a woman. All she does is shop for clothes. She has a lot of cedar closets in her house and they are hung full of clothes and she can never wear them all. The fact is she doesn't go to enough places to wear half of them."

"Aren't some people killing?"

"Yes. I wish I had some of her money."

"So do I."

"She's making a mistake, she is. All she thinks about is those kids. Babies, babies, babies, that's all she talks. She'll lose her husband, that's what she will do."

"Oh, I don't know, if she makes nice children out of 'em they can hold her husband for her. But if women who haven't children lose 'em, they just go, and that's that."

"I wouldn't want a man to hang on just for the children's sake."

"Oh, wouldn't you? Well if you love 'em you hold 'em anyway you can. I know. I didn't have the children."

"Well, if she takes him she can have a car and a house and a cook and everything, but if she insists upon sticking to this boob, she ain't got nothing."

"Oh, I don't know. The 'boob' is young and handsome and has a good line, and if you get a laugh now and then, you got something. I had that kind once, and, gosh, I had more fun than I can get now going to funny shows with the dyspeptic I tied to. All he does is fight with the waitresses about food, and ain't they got any bran muffins, and he don't want fresh fruit, and prunes is all that agrees with him, and sometimes I wish I'd taken the 'boob' and been able to laugh now and then over a corned beef dinner."

"Well, dearie, have it sent on approval and wear it tonight, and be careful. You can send it back tomorrow. Don't go back with it; put in a call in one of these highty tighty voices, and as long as you have a charge account they can't do anything about it."

"Isn't it the limit the way those cheap clerks look at you just because you bring back something they think you've worn?"
